reduced shipments from other Pacific areas. We must share sugar with our allies. We must also use sugar to manufacture ammunition.

One big reason why sugar can be spared for home canning is the beet sugar industry here in the West. Production of this home-grown sugar is over 100% greater now than it was during the last war.

Refined to sparkling purity, home-grown beet sugar is identical with any other top-quality sugar. It is just as white. Just as fine in grain. Just as sweet to taste. An ideal sugar for all your home canning!

The top-quality sugar home-grown in the West

A wartime plan to conserve summer fruits has been announced by our Government. Housewives are asked to can these fine fruits to prevent waste—and to step up family nutrition this coming winter.

A special sugar allotment now makes canning possible. You may buy an extra pound of sugar for every four quarts of fruit you put up. Check your local ration board for full information.

This new sugar-for-canning allotment is sufficient to hold fine flavor and appearance in canned fruits, and to assure excellent keeping quality. It is a generous allotment considering the present U. S. sugar situation.
