Doctors Slate Meeting, Deny McNutt Word

PORTLAND, June 15—(AP) Aroused by Federal Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt's charge that "there is an apparent lack of interest on the part of your profession to volunteer" for war duty, the Pacific Northwest Medical association will start its annual convention here Wednesday.

In reply to McNutt's assertion, made recently at Atlantic City, Dr. Richard B. Adams, public policy committee chairman of the Oregon State Medical society, telegraphed:

"Many of our members have applied to army medical corps months ago but to date have heard nothing concerning their applications. Other members have received commissions two and three months ago but have not yet been called to active duty. Know of no physician in our community who is not working 12 hours or more every day."

McNutt's answer, if any, will be considered by the convention Saturday, officials said.

Approximately 300 medical men from Oregon, Washington and Idaho are expected to attend the sessions.

Maccabees Slate Allied Speakers

British, Norwegian, Chinese consuls, a representative of the Russian consul and Portland's mayor, Earl Riley, will be among the speakers at the United Nations meeting sponsored by the Maccabees of Oregon, scheduled for Thursday, night, June 25, at 7:45, in the Masonic temple, 1119 SW Park, Portland.

Believed to be the first meeting of its kind, the gathering is intended to demonstrate the unity of the United Nations in winning the war and the peace to follow. The public is invited to attend free of charge and anyone having extra passenger space in a car is asked to call Gen. Newland, commander of Capital lodge No. 84D.

Oehler Named Referee
PORTLAND, June 15—(AP)—Appointment of Lester G. Oehler, Corvallis attorney, as referee in bankruptcy for Linn, Marion, Lane and Benton counties was announced Monday by Federal Judge James Alger Fee.
