SEC. 2—PAGE 4

Sunday Morning, June 21, 1942

JAMES ELLISON and Virginia Gilmore in a new chiller, "The Carter Case," now playing through Wednesday at the Hollywood theatre with the companion picture, "Nothing But the Truth," with Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard and Edward Arnold.

PAULETTE GODDARD and Ray Milland, starred together for the first time, find what they're looking for in "The Lady Has Plans" which starts today at the Grand theatre.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S ADVENTURES in "The Gold Rush," which opens today at the Elsinore theatre through United Artists release, are unfolded against the snow-capped peaks of the Klondike, with Charlie, the lone prospector, finally winning romance, the girl, and a gigantic fortune in gold.

Colman Plays Husband Role

Two's company, but three's a crowd—especially when the third is the husband in the case, trying to break up his wife's fleeting romance with a playboy.

This is the gay theme of "My Life With Caroline," Ronald Colman's newest starring vehicle, starting today at the Liberty theatre, which also introduces the British actress, Anna Lee, to the American screen.

Colman portrays the husband, a busy and wealthy publisher very much in love with his charming spouse in spite of her flighty ways. But she feels she is neglected and abused because he doesn't give up his business and spend all his time with her, and this feeling makes her susceptible to the flatteries of the rich young bachelors she meets at various expensive resorts.

Every so often one of these gentry persuades her that she must divorce her husband and marry him—and on each occasion the husband hurries to the scene and cleverly turns the tables on the interloper to provide the gay comedy of the plot.

Charles Winninger, Reginald Gardner and Gilbert Roland head the supporting cast in the picture, which was produced and directed by Lewis Milestone for RKO Radio.

Cagney Stars In Air Epic

"Captains of the Clouds," brilliant technicolor epic of the air, with James Cagney in the starring role, is now showing at the Capitol theatre. Brenda Marshall and Dennis Morgan head the featured cast which includes Alan Hale, George Tobias, Reginald Gardner and Reginald Denny, as well as many officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force, with whose cooperation the picture was filmed.

Made on location in Canada, under the direction of Michael Curtiz, "Captains of the Clouds" has the scenic background of one of the most picturesque locales in the western hemisphere. Played against this backdrop, is the action-packed story of Canada's heroes of the air in arms against the axis.

"Captains of the Clouds" has Cagney cast as a sky-riding, hijacking bush pilot, a lone eagle who steals business right out from under the noses of the other pilots' planes. A bunch of the other pilots band together determined to "get" him, and they track him down at the home of a little spitfire of a French-Canadian girl, Brenda Marshall, who is engaged to one of the other pilots, played by Dennis Morgan. But their quarry has a fractured skull, an injury resulting from a playful tussle with the girl. Morgan flies him to the doctor in Ottawa and saves his life. In return, Cagney, when he has recovered, elopes with Brenda. They have a brief whirl together in the bright spots of Canada, Montreal, Quebec, Toronto. Then he leaves his new wife flat, explaining to her he only married her to save a good guy like Morgan from her. Back with some of his old pals in the bush country, they hear Prime Minister Churchill's "We Shall Never Surrender" speech, and they all agree on the spot to enlist in the RCAF.

They are chagrined, however, when they find that they are wanted in the service as instructors, not as fighter pilots. Cagney finds the rules and regulations and the tedium of teaching almost unbearable, and finally gets into a serious scrape which results in his being kicked out of the service. For another escapade he is deprived of his civilian flying license.

In a last desperate attempt to fight the enemy in the air, Cagney takes his dead pal's papers and applies for the job of flying a bomber to England. Morgan turns out to be the officer in charge of the squadron, but he decides to give Cagney his chance and assigns him to a plane.

Charlie Chaplin's Famous 'Gold Rush' Opens Today

One of the many factors which stand out in the minds of the audience after seeing a Charlie Chaplin picture is that the film invariably closes with the little fellow walking away from the camera alone—his pathetically jaunty figure trudging toward the horizon—in the hope of better things to come.

So, the audience leaves the theatre with a laugh on its lips but a lump in its throat, for such frustration in the case of the little fellow doesn't seem fair. Life never metes out to him his fair proportion of the good things he deserves. For Charlie's famous character is the symbol of all that is pathetic, good and kind in the human race. He never rebels except at an unkindness or injustice done to some person other than himself.

However, in "The Gold Rush," which is slated for its local premiere at the Elsinore theatre today, Charlie veers away from the usual Chaplin formula. Perhaps when Charlie was writing this particular story, he, too, rebelled at life's rough treatment of the little fellow. At any rate, in "The Gold Rush," the popular little tramp not only gets the girl of his dreams, but becomes a multi-millionaire to boot.

The story of "The Gold Rush" tells of the famous gold rush days in the Klondike where our hero suffers the rigors of cold, hunger and unbelievable hardships and nurses an aching heart all the while he goes on prospecting for the treasure hidden in the earth's surface.

Charlie appears in the role of the lone prospector and his supporting cast is headed by Mack Swain, Tom Murray, Henry Bergman, Malcolm Waite and Georgia Hale. Charlie himself wrote and directed "The Gold Rush" and he also composed the music which was directed by Max Terr.

The setting of "The Gold Rush" is the Alaska of the Klondike gold rush with its dance halls and dance hall girls; with its miners old and young; with toughs and hangers-on; with newspaper correspondents and photographers—a locale that teems with color and excitement, drama, comedy and romance.

In a last desperate attempt to fight the enemy in the air, Cagney takes his dead pal's papers and applies for the job of flying a bomber to England. Morgan turns out to be the officer in charge of the squadron, but he decides to give Cagney his chance and assigns him to a plane.

Actor Anders Returns Home

Glenn Anders, the stage actor who has played the leads in three Pulitzer prize winners is back in his home town nowadays, making good. His home town is not exactly an easy place in which to make good, either. The home town is Hollywood.

After a distinguished career on the Broadway stage and hundreds of stages elsewhere, Anders finally has gone from foot-lights to films. He has gone back where he came from—Hollywood.

Making his debut in a Hollywood picture, the acting notable from the stage makes his first Hollywood film appearance in the Bob Hope-Paulette Goddard starring picture, "Nothing But the Truth," the new Paramount farce comedy opening today at the Hollywood theatre. The script of "Nothing But the Truth," which itself was a famous stage laugh hit, Anders considers the cleverest he has ever read, in the theatre or out.

Actually, although Anders is making his Hollywood debut, he appeared in a picture once before, made at Paramount's eastern studios on Long Island. It was "Laughter," produced in 1930, starring Fredric March and Nancy Carroll. But his stage activities kept him busy after that, and he practically forgot all about pictures, until recently, when Producer Arthur Hornblow, Jr., persuaded him to take another fling at the screen.
