Pair of Fliers Rescue 15 in Greenland

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 —(AP)—Two daring rescues of 15 stranded army airmen from the bleak and treacherous ice cap of interior Greenland were disclosed by the navy Thursday in an announcement crediting the accomplishments to Lieut. Col. Bernt Balchen of the army and Lieut. A. Y. Parunak of the navy.

Thirteen of the men were members of a crew of a "flying fortress," which had been forced down about 100 miles inland from a navy base. They were taken out safely on July 6 after Balchen had led them across alpine-like icefields to a temporary lake where Parunak picked them up in his navy patrol plane. Next day the lake which made this rescue possible had disappeared.

Two weeks later a similar operation by Parunak and Balchen brought about the rescue of Col. Robert W. C. Wimsatt of Washington, D.C., and his sergeant, unidentified. Their light plane had made a forced landing on the edge of the ice cap, near a regular lake, while they were on patrol duty. Wimsatt had been injured in the landing and the speed of the aerial rescue probably saved his life.

Balchen decided Parunak and he should designate their joint enterprises as the "Greenland Co-operative Salvage Company."

(Incidentally, the war department announced Thursday that Balchen, famous flier who won renown as a pilot on several arctic and antarctic expeditions, had been promoted to the temporary rank of colonel.)

Cubs Collect Scrap

Cub Scout pack 17 spent Thursday evening collecting scrap rubber and paper. They boys were supervised by Scoutmaster Floyd Steward. They used the scout bus to transport their collections.

Army regulations, girls, are going to do things to your hair. You can blame it all on the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps' caps, or hats, if you will. Mary Martin, at the left, shows you a hair-do that's pretty, but out as far as members of the WAAC are concerned. Eileen Wilnot, however, models the "military" coiffure, created by the Los Angeles Coiffure guild. Just the thing for wear by the "Wacks."

Employment Probed by New Yorkers

Representatives of a New York legislative committee investigating industrial and labor conditions were in Salem Thursday conferring with staff members of the Oregon unemployment compensation commission.

Employment problems, involving both war-time and post-war conditions, were discussed. The group left here late Thursday for Portland where they will confer with representatives of the shipyards, longshoremen and other industries.

Included in the group are Dwyer W. Shugrue, chief assistant counsel for the committee; Milton O. Laysen, executive director of the New York unemployment insurance commission, and Karel Ficek, procedures and planning clerk.

Members of the committee already have visited Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado and California. Their next stop will be in Washington.

Australia Paper Asks More News From MacArthur

SYDNEY, Australia, Friday, Aug. 7.—(AP)—The Sydney Daily Telegraph said Friday that Gen. Douglas MacArthur "must tell the Australian and American peoples more about developments on Australia's northern front."

"He is the one man who can speak with equal surety to both countries," the newspaper continued in a leading editorial, "and carry to the American people a conviction of the danger threatening the interest of the United Nations in this part of the Pacific."

The Australians are perplexed, it added, and because the allied communiques say so little, they are becoming anxious.

The Telegraph's statement followed recent criticism by Deputy Opposition Leader W. M. Hughes of allied operations in allowing the Japanese to establish a base at Gona and Buna on the northern New Guinea coast. In reply, Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey, commander of allied land forces, said the Japanese used trained commando troops and that the allies could not have prevented the landing without serious losses of troops and material.

Capital Influence Told to Realtors

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., Aug. 6.—(AP)—William Macrossie, president of the American institute of real estate appraisers, said Thursday night that Washington should be consulted on any serious local problems arising out of the federal rent control program.

"Our lives more and more are being controlled from Washington—this is true not only of business, but of the professions," he told the annual convention of the Oregon Association of Real Estate boards.

Swim Champ Retires

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Helen Crlenkovich, 21-year-old national AAU diving champion who has won seven national diving crowns in the past three years, announced her retirement from active competition Thursday.
