One of the last to finish the first day's play in the 72-hole test, Hogan took the lead from Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, NY, and Ralph Guldahl of Santa Fe, Calif., melting seven strokes off par and setting a new competitive course record. The old record of 68, set by Walter Hagen when he won the Canadian open in 1931 and tied by Gordon Brydson, the Mississauga pro, in the Ontario open of 1937, already had been blasted by Wood and Guldahl, whose 66's left them in a tie for second at the end of the opening round.,

After shooting the first four holes in even par figures, Hogan birdied seven of the remaining 14 holes, dropping a 10-foot putt on the 18th green to nose out the early leaders.

Stephan Must Die, Treason

German-Born Says He Will Be Saved By Germany

DETROIT, Aug. 6 .- (A)-German-born Max Stephan must die for treason against the United States, despite his boast that "Germany will not let me hang."

He will be hanged within the By Sords red brick walls of the federal correctional institution at Milan, Mich., on the morning of Friday, Nov. 13, 1942, Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle decreed Thursday. His crime was the assistance he gave an escaped nazi prisoner of war who visited Detroit April 18 while trying to flee from Canada to his fatherland. The prisoner, Lieut. Hans Peter Krug, was captured in San Antonio, Tex., and testified at Stephan's trial for the government. "Stephan never lost his love for Germany," Judge Tuttle told a packed courtroom.

Weary, pale, wearing the same wrinkled gray suit he wore during the trial at which he was convicted by a jury July 2, the heavy-set restaurant owner stared blankly as his sentence was read.

His wife, a rose-complexioned woman in a pale dress, crushed her head into her arms and left the jammed courtroom.

Outside she wept bitterly, and then fainted. Several hundred men and women heard the verdict in startled It was the first such conviction in a federal court in 148 years. In 1794 two men were convicted in connection with the so-called whisky rebellion in Pennsylvania. President Washington promptly John Brown, the abolitionist, who raided the federal arsenal at Harper's Ferry before the Civil War was convicted and hanged for treason, but it was in a Virginia state court. "The life of this traitor, Max

Stephan, is less valuable than the lives of our loyal sons which are being given to the cause of the United States," Judge Tuttle said in a husky voice, visibly wrought. "This court does not hesitate to take the life of one traitor, if it, in turn, will help the just cause of the United States. "This court should, in no hesitating and uncertain way, say to the disloyal element that during this awful war the penalty for treason is death."

cigar, he called out: "Victory will be sure. Germany will not let me hang." And at another time he said:

'This war will be over soon and when it is over I will get out of jail. A victorious Germany will not leave Stephan in jail." Judge Tuttle himself discussed this point of view, in explaining why he had not selected a penalty of life-imprisonment. "Disloyal citizens know even better than the court does," the judge said, "that a prisoner sentenced to life is eligible to pardon after 15 years and also that after the war such prisoners often are paroled or their sentences com-
