McNary Asks Wait in Scrapping Of Battleship, Branch Rails

WASHINGTON, DC, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Senator McNary has suggested that the war production board use all scrap steel available before it takes rails from branch railroads and historical objects.

It has been suggested that steel from the historic and decommissioned battleship Oregon be used in the war effort, and the board said it would requisition about 25 miles of rails in the Vale-Brogan branch of the Union Pacific railroad.

The senator did not question the board's power to seize historic and railroad steel, granted by executive order of President Roosevelt. It has exercised this power numerous times in the past when it has found the material would be more valuable to the war effort than in its present state.

The interstate commerce commission has ordered for September 6 a hearing on the Union Pacific's petition to abandon the branch rail line.

If the ICC denies the railroad's request, and the war production board decides to requisition the rails, the senator said, the situation might develop that the road would have to apply to WPB for priority to keep the rails.

As to the suggested scrapping of the Oregon, Senator McNary said: "I suggest that the WPB utilize all scrap, such as the old streetcar tracks in Portland, some of which are being covered with new surfacing. I told those officials that before any effort is made to break up museums such as the Oregon, it should first use all the old streetcar tracks in the country and use less iron and steel found in all cities."

"I insist that the Oregon and other historical sites should be left unless we reach a point where it is necessary to take them from the entire country, and not just single out Oregon. The sensible thing would be to take the old tracks but leave spur tracks and our historical objects."

Ranchers and miners served by the Vale-Brogan branch have protested against requisitioning of the steel.

Vitamins a 'Must' In Victory Drive

Vitamin 'A' Invaluable for Both Fighting Forces and Home Forces

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Vitamin A through a healthful diet, which not only helps maintain good health, but also helps the body resist disease, is essential for the fighting forces. It is also essential for the home forces. The United States government has announced that it has established a national campaign to increase the consumption of vitamin A through a healthful diet.

A department of commerce report showed that up to March 1, 1942, this country had shipped to its allies 100,000 pounds of vitamin A. This is a record for the United States. With the help of the United States government, the world's supply of vitamin A is being increased.

V Mail Now Ready Here

"V mail" for service men and women in overseas service is now available through the Salem post-office, Postmaster Henry R. Crawford announced Thursday.

Three envelopes may be had upon application at the postoffice. The letter is written or typewritten on paper which is mailed with the required amount of postage. When it reaches the army or navy postoffice it is photographed on microfilm which requires much less space in transfer.

When it reaches the overseas point for which it is intended it is enlarged and printed on paper similar to that on which it was written. The original copy of the letter is kept until the microfilm has been enlarged and the letter printed.

The aim of the "V mail" is to conserve space and provide if possible more rapid transfer of mail.
