New Caledonia Adopts Yank Soldiers, Who Like Strange Land and Amaze Natives

By MURLIN SPENCER
Wide World Features

NEW CALEDONIA—The American army's custom of working all hours of the day and night has New Caledonians baffled, but otherwise inhabitants of the strategic French island in the southwest Pacific and the doughboys from America have "clicked" from the start.

Many French families have virtually adopted certain soldiers, and it is a rare home that has not entertained a soldier for dinner, even though the guests and hosts have had a difficult time understanding each other.

But while New Caledonians close their shops and stores for "la heure siesia" from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. each day, American army traffic goes on 24 hours a day and the islanders watch in amazement.

Soldiers from many states are on active duty in the scenic tropical island about 1000 miles northeast of Australia. They have found it impressive with its warm climate, high mountains, green valleys and palm trees.

The war has brought marked changes to the island—blackouts, prohibition of liquor to soldiers and rationing of gasoline—and just as marked changes in the lives of the soldiers who have gone there.

The business of getting a date with a girl is different from what it was in the United States; the weather is different; the insects are different, and the food is different.

Soldiers fortunate enough to meet some of the country, dark-eyed French girls find they must obtain permission from the girl's father before they may call on her. Those able to arrange a date may have to bring a friend for the girl's sister or cousin.

Some parents believe nuptial arrangements are in order after a young man calls on their daughter two or three times, although the soldiers probably will help to liquidate that custom. Legal restrictions make marriage between local girls and American soldiers next to impossible, so American sweethearts of soldiers in New Caledonia have little to worry about.

New Caledonia was discovered by Captain Cook in 1774. It first gained attention as a penal colony. Later valuable minerals were discovered and Societe le Nickel, internationally owned corporation, mined 8 per cent of the world's supply of nickel, second only to Canada's output.

Our first view of the island was the wavering line of mountains and the coral reef. We soon discovered that this new home was a land with a foreign tongue.

Favorable trade winds help to keep the average temperature from 61 to 79 degrees for nine of the 12 months of the year and snow is unheard of. The seasons are reversed from those in the United States.

While malaria is virtually unknown there, we can truthfully say we have never seen so many nor such large mosquitoes in our lives. Soldiers are individually equipped with bed and head nets. The frequent, light rain-falls also are an inconvenience, but are compensated for by the beautiful rainbows which follow.

Noumea, the capital, was known as the "Paris of the Pacific," although few soldiers can understand why. There are no night clubs or ballrooms, so the armed forces fall back on occasional movies.

The soldiers have found lobsters, oysters, crabs, rousette snite (flying fox), bat soup and guava jelly to their liking. In the hotels, Javanese garçons are waiters. These clean, nimble figures, quietly move around the tables, are dressed in clean white uniforms, but are barefoot to the last man.

Soldiers also are impressed by the abundance of fresh fruit. Bananas, oranges, coconuts, lemons may be picked off trees or purchased from natives at low cost. The bananas are smaller than those grown in Central America, although just as tasty, and we have learned to eat them green with a little salt added.

Nearly every soldier agrees that most of the canned "GI" food is good, though it does become monotonous at times. Fresh meat was a rarity at first, but now beef is available and the large herds of deer have provided venison steak.

There were Japanese on the island when war broke out, many of them engaged in retail trades. They have been interned or shipped away.

While the American soldiers miss their families and friends, the customary generosity and hospitality of the French, as well as of the natives, have done much to make us feel at home. Many a firm friendship has been formed between soldiers and the New Caledonians, as is evidenced by the number of letters being exchanged between them and the soldiers' families in the states.

We all await anxiously the day we victoriously sail for home, but we'll always remember the easy going, comfortable life of the population, the beauty of the country and the friendships we have formed at our wartime home.

SAFEWAY Homemakers' Guide

NUMBER 56 ★ Hints and suggestions for box lunches ★ Safeway week-end prices now good every day ★ A shopping lesson from a girl named Nora

Looking for ways to make box lunches more interesting?

More than ever, it is imperative that the meals you serve your family be appetizing, filling, and up to nutritional standards. And that goes for a box lunch as well as any other meal of the day. In many cases (war workers on night shifts, for instance) the box lunch is the most important meal of the day. And it must not only be appetizing and nutritious, it must be planned and packed to stay attractive for several hours after it's been prepared.

So don't use less of your menu-planning ingenuity on box lunches—use more.

Here are a few hints and a few menus, planned and tested by the Safeway Homemakers' Bureau, that might help you in your planning.

Use the best equipment available. Be sure the tops to all jars and bottles fit perfectly. Use plenty of wax-paper.

Vary the bread for sandwiches. Use the more uncommon types of bread—ones in a whole—pumpernickel, raisin, nut bread, sesame seed, etc.

Use lots of butter. This helps keep sandwiches from drying out.

Don't include sandwiches like tomato and lettuce. They're almost certain to wilt. If he likes tomatoes, put in a whole one instead.
