Sam "Golf Bag" Hunt, erstwhile Capone gangster, lies on an operating table in the Bridewell hospital, Chicago, closely watched by guards, as two doctors remove a bullet from his leg. His offer to submit to the operation interrupted a trial at which he is charged with the slaying of Michael Wade, a negro houseman. Hunt agreed to the procedure when the state contended that the bullet in Hunt's leg was fired from a different gun than killed Wade. The defense insisted that the bullets came from the same gun and were fired by Wade or a negro companion. Findings of a ballistics expert were to be submitted in court. (Associated Press Telegram.)

Ride to Salem Ends in Fine And Sentence

A joy-ride to Salem for William Whitehead of Portland and three friends eventually ended Thursday in a $100 fine and 30 days in the county jail for Whitehead. He told police the foursome were riding in a borrowed car and were drinking. While proceeding eastward in the 300 block on State street around 1 a. m. Thursday, one of Whitehead's friends suddenly leaped from the car. The incident flustered Whitehead to the extent that he rammed into a parked car, almost demolishing it, and became so frightened he hurriedly drove off.

After later discharging the remaining two friends from the car, Whitehead said he proceeded back toward Portland and picked up a hitchhiker enroute. After discussing the previous happenings with the stranger, Whitehead was advised to proceed on foot to Portland while the stranger "drove the car as far as it would go."

While walking toward Portland, Whitehead came upon the abandoned car in the middle of the highway, and at the same time a state policeman came upon Whitehead. He was returned to Salem and booked for being drunk on a public highway. Later he signed a confession to all the happenings.

The car was brought back to Salem and identified as the one which had hit the parked car on State street, and the owner of the wrecked auto swore out a complaint against Whitehead for reckless driving, at which he was sentenced.

Many Women Offer Help

Salem restaurant men are receiving many offers from women to accept part-time work during rush hours, Mickey Flax, president of the Salem Restaurant association, reported Thursday. "The response to our call has been fine," Flax said. "We are already arranging to put on extra employees to help train the volunteers, who will work and learn at the same time. More applications are still needed."

Ralph Nohlgren, association secretary, said the proprietors hoped within a short time to effect re-

26 Quarts of Canned Fruit Loom, Oregon

PORTLAND, Aug. 14.—(P)—Oregonians will rely heavily on a diet of home preserved foods this winter, if figures released by the sugar rationing board Thursday mean anything.

In June alone, applications were filed for 7,138,755 pounds for preserving fruits and vegetables—which would allow every man, woman and child in the state 28 quarts, figuring a pound for every four quarts.

July figures haven't been totaled, but they appear to be about the size of the June list.
