

Allies Might Divert Nazis

Attack Full Surprise; Valued Knowledge Gained at Dieppe

this strong force. The commandos and Canadians attacked with impetuosity seldom seen in this war and were able to carry all local objectives before them.

Thus in the center much damage was done. The allies ran into ill luck on the right flank. Landing craft speeding toward the shore ran into a German convoy, a sure sign that the enemy expected no attack in the region of Dieppe.

Larry Meier, International News Service correspondent representing the Association of American Correspondents in London, who with the raiders meeting the convoy of tankers, said it at first appeared to be a German trap. A furious battle ensued in which two of four anti-aircraft ships were sunk, Meier reported.

There were only three errors in the fine timing of the entire operation and none of these affected the success of the operations.

Casualties were believed to have been heavy but not as heavy as they might have been. The general feeling was that the next major operation, which everyone expects to be on a similar scale, would be concluded with less loss and with ever greater success.

Most details of allied losses—admittedly heavy—were couched in silence. Some 91 German planes, a large percentage of craft believed available in western Europe because of the demands of the Russian front, were shot down and 100 others either were destroyed or damaged.

The RAF admitted the loss of 98 planes, eight of which were Spitfires flown by US pilots who probably destroyed three of the nazis' four new Focke-Wulf 190's. Three American pilots were saved and their losses were sustained in 10 squadron sweeps. Thirty allied pilots in all were saved.

Even as the last barges brought their precious cargoes of wounded men and German prisoners—some of them bulky officers—RAF fighters three miles high were flying the Straits of Dover in the direction of Boulogne.

The raid was on a wide front of perhaps 15 miles. The Canadians were preponderant, but an unspecified small number of tough US rangers fought throughout the engagement in which the raiders successfully landed tanks. British commandos and Fighting French soldiers made up the remainder of the force.

The German radio blared tales throughout the day about repulsing an "invasion" with huge losses, including the capture of 1500 prisoners and the destruction of nearly a score of ships. Officially, the British said nothing of the number of land or sea casualties.

The commandos achieved the underlying objective of testing the German coastal defenses and gathering vital information about them. The allies also achieved a tactical success in each of their six landings, and moved a great force (the Germans said at least one division, or 15,000 men) almost without being molested. And they destroyed an important number of coastal defenses including a battery of six-inch naval guns at Varangeville, about 4 1/2 miles west of Dieppe.

As a result, the allies will be better prepared to attack Nazi coastal fortifications in the future and the Germans probably will feel compelled to strengthen the western invasion ports at the expense of men who otherwise would be hurled against Russia.

The Germans declared that an artificial fog enabled the allied forces to land on the beaches and continued to make grotesque claims of damage to shipping which in no way was borne out by reports of eye witnesses, including this correspondent.

Not a single cruiser was hit by bombs in the action and the German claims to have damaged four destroyers and four motor torpedo boats and four transports totaling 13,000 tons simply does not jibe with personal experiences in the battle area.

The RAF dominated the skies except for a few brief intervals. German bombing attacks on shipping at those times was inaccurate due to a terrific anti-aircraft barrage.

Men who raided Dieppe roamed the streets of this quiet port Thursday night. There wasn't one who didn't look forward to "another shot at those so-and-os."

August 1941 Record Sales Now Topped

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20-(AP)—Despite records set by department stores for August trade a year ago in the silk stocking rush, sales this month have run ahead of last year for the first half of the month in 48 stores in a half dozen western cities.

A year ago last week, Salt Lake City stores upped sales 32 cents on the 1940 dollar. But last week the same department stores boomed sales 34 per cent over the sensational 1941 mark.

Sales in 48 western stores last week ran 10 per cent higher than a year ago. In the preceding week there was a 1 per cent decline from the 1941 peak, which lowered 46 per cent over 1940. Sales which a year ago averaged 38 per cent higher for the two weeks than in 1940, were topped by another 5 per cent this year.

Harvest Need Not Yet Dire

Some More Pickers Asked Now; Buses Scheduled Today

beans were lost because of delayed picking and for other causes which do not apply this year.

Because of delayed plantings many of the bean yards will not be ready for harvest until the last week of August or the first week of September. It has been estimated by persons in touch with the harvest situation that at least one-fourth of the yards are not yet being picked. The harvest will probably last well past October 1, those in close with the situation predicted.

The hop yards are having little difficulty in obtaining pickers now, although several yards could have used more pickers the first few days, Baillie said. The pickers consider the pay so good that the only employment problem is with yard men, who have in several cases quit the yard work in order to pick hops.

Traffic Light Rules Remain On Highway

No relaxation in red traffic light regulations as they affect traffic from Center street entering Capitol will be made in spite of recent council action, Alderman L. F. LeGarie of the city police and traffic committee announced Thursday.

Consultation with state highway department traffic experts, who had recommended the change so far as traffic from Capitol entering Center is concerned, brought the final decision, LeGarie declared. That other cars could not be allowed to enter the heavier stream of traffic on the Capitol street highway without hazard was the opinion of the highway officials, he said, "and they can control that situation since Capitol is not only a city street but a state highway as well."

A sign has already been erected allowing vehicles from Capitol to turn right onto Center after stopping at the red light. On downtown intersections where the change in the traffic regulation is to become effective with the erection of similar signs, those notices were not expected to be posted for another two or three days. Lack of help during the vacation season has slowed the action, LeGarie said.

Urging motorists to utilize the new rules to help the flow of traffic, LeGarie pointed out that the usual motoring manners and regulations are to prevail, that cars to be turned right should be brought to a full stop in the right hand traffic lane before proceeding to turn and that the pedestrian has the right-of-way.

Pacific Cost Of Living Climbs, July

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20-(AP)—It cost more to live in most Pacific coast cities last month than in June.

Two authoritative surveys agree on the trend, but disagree in amount of the increase in spots.

Both the federal bureau of labor statistics and the national industrial conference board said living costs in Los Angeles went up 1.1 per cent from June to July. But for San Francisco, the bureau said the month's rise was 0.2 per cent, while the board figured it 0.9 per cent.

A terse summary of both reports would say food costs climbed and took the cost of living alone.

The conference board said of national trends: general costs went up 0.2 per cent, food 0.8, and women's clothes 0.1. Other items declined or held even. Men's clothes declined 0.2 per cent in costs, as did housing.

The board placed Los Angeles and Sacramento one-two in its list of 67 industrial cities in point of rising costs. In both the July rise was 1.1 per cent. San Francisco's 0.9 rise was third among the western cities. Oakland costs held steady.

In the northwest Seattle had a rise of 0.3 per cent, Portland no change, while Spokane consumers had the advantage of a decline of 0.3 per cent.

Hearings Closed On Contracts in Packing Firms

CHICAGO, Aug. 20-(AP)—The war labor board hearings involving the big four packing companies and three unions and affecting more than 50,000 employees, were concluded Thursday, Prof. Nathan P. Feinsinger, panel chairman announced. No final decision was announced.

The hearings in the case began on July 6 and companies involved were Swift & company, Armour & company, Cudahy & company and Wilson and company. The unions in the Swift case were the Packinghouse Workers, organizing committee (CIO); the Amalgamated Butcher workmen and Meatcutters of North America (AFL) and the International Brotherhood of Swift employees, independent. Only the PWOC was involved in the other companies' cases.

Feinsinger said that in the Swift and Wilson cases, the question involved the drafting of an entire first contract while in the Armour and Cudahy cases, the question was on a renewal of a prior contract.
