

Seek Teachers In Jap Camps

University of Oregon Man Presents Task To Normal Students MONMOUTH—Dr. William C. Jones, head of the department of political science at the University of Oregon, who is temporarily serving as recruiting officer for war relocation authority, visited the placement bureau for teachers at Oregon College of Education, this week. He was seeking teachers for the Japanese internment camps in Idaho, Utah and Arizona.

Doctor Jones stated that this specific teacher need would offer applicants an excellent opportunity to serve their country in the emergency; that salaries will be liberal; and several hundred teachers will be required. Teacher qualifications for these posts are high. The minimum for elementary positions are a bachelor's degree from an accredited university, college or teachers' college, with an elementary certificate, special or general, from such an institution; and individuals of high mental and moral caliber. Some administrative posts also are open.
