Mrs. Northrop recently came west from Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Both the attendants carried peach gladioluses.

Mr. Barr was best man for Mr. Brown and Mr. Langford was usher. Mr. Robert Hannah of Portland gave the bride in marriage. Mrs. Alfred Johnson, niece of the bride, played the wedding music.

Following the ceremony, a dinner was served at a table centered by a tall white wedding cake. White tapers and pink and white snapdragons completed the decorations.

The Women... She Has Young Ideas

Washington keeps hearing that Franklin Roosevelt wants to give Florence Harriman another big job.

Mrs. Harriman says, when you ask her: "I haven't heard anything about it."

Another big job for Florence Harriman would top a mighty impressive list ending with "American Minister to Norway 1937-40."

Since then she hasn't wasted time as a grandmother past 70. Today she is chairman of the Washington branch of the National Russian Relief and chairman of the American Friends of Norway. She shuttles back and forth between Washington, New York and the house where she has summered in Rye, NY, working to raise $100,000 for each. Besides that she is chairman of the American section of the International Free World association, formed "to defeat the axis powers and work for a world order based on freedom democracy and justice."

When that doesn't keep her busy she whips out on a lecture tour. Last winter in Minnesota, her bus stuck tight in a snowbank. While the rest of the passengers settled back in disgust to wait Mrs. Harriman climbed out and began a five-mile walk to the town where she was to lecture at three.

"The women of the west are surprisingly wide awake," she said. "Those women are simply marvelous. They educate themselves continually and are most eager to do something constructive in the war effort."

"There's a lot of work for women past 50 to do and it's not necessary to get into uniform or run to Washington to do it."

Mrs. Harriman's hair has been white for a good many years, but her back is still straight as a rod heritage of her little girl days when her father made her walk with a book on top of her head half an hour every day.

After her New York debut at Delmonico's and her marriage to Banker J. Borden Harriman, she might have concentrated on the Park Avenue whirl. Instead she began reading social problems and before long was "up to her eyes" in work. She formed the first women's organization active in a political campaign when Wilson ran for the Presidency in 1912, was a strong advocate for the League of Nations, later was democratic committee woman from the District of Columbia and then official hostess for the democratic convention at Philadelphia in 1936.

Langford of Portland, Robert Hannah, Miss Mildred Myers of Portland; Mrs. John Richardson of Wisconsin; Mr. and Mrs. Ed Sisco of Melama; Mrs. Sarah Chase of McMinnville, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Miller of McMinnville, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Peltier of Portland, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Johnson, George and Richard Johnson.

Monument Is Erected at Pioneer Grave

A grey granite monument bearing simply the names and dates of their births and death, but marking for generations to come the final resting place of Judge and Mrs. J. Quinn Thornton, was placed recently in Lee Mission cemetery as a tribute from Dr. Ellen Chamberlin of Salem.

To 93-year-old Miss Chamberlin, oldest living graduate of Willamette university and former instructor at that institution, from which she last spring received an honorary doctorate, the severely simple granite is not only a contribution to history. J. Quinn Thornton's name looms large in the story of pioneer Oregon, but the friendship the early state supreme court justice and his wife bore to her own parents is equally important to the donor.

Judge Thornton, appointed to Oregon's supreme court bench in 1847, a year after his arrival here, was shortly sent to Washington to urge formation of a territorial government. He was author, too, of tributes to the country's scenery and of a two-volume work "Oregon and California in 1848. Mrs. Thornton receives small mention in Oregon histories but friends of early days in Salem recall that she wrote well and that her skill was often used in preparation of the tributes published as parts of obituaries. Such a tribute she wrote when the mother of Miss Chamberlin and Mrs. Charles Weller died, the sisters recall.

Engraving on the monument, northeast of the mission plot, was arranged by Mrs. Jessie M. Crossan, foster daughter of the Thorntons. Small wooden markers such as were commonly in use when Judge and Mrs. Thornton died in 1888 and 1889 were replaced by the new stone.

Delivery Huge At Stockyard

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 1—(AP)—Portland's union stockyards bulged with beef on the hoof Tuesday as civilians braced themselves for meat rationing.

Harry H. Burdick, president of the yards, reported today that a 19-year-old delivery record fell Monday as 4172 cattle arrived. The previous record of 4142 had stood since October 8, 1923.

Burdick said the volume of cattle being handled by the yards was so great that he was seeking priority rating for an expansion to cost between $40,000 and $50,000.

the Nazis invaded the country she followed the government north—but not until she had sent the first message the White House received reporting the invasion.

She hates the phrase "woman diplomat."

"You don't say 'man diplomat' or 'man lawyer,'" she says. "Because a woman is a woman is no reason why she should not make a good diplomat. There are women who make excellent diplomats—just as there are men who don't. A woman has a keen instinct of what to do at a given moment. And she ought to be more tactful than a man because so much of her life is spent in using tact."
