Here Color in The Rough

The newest thing in color is no color at all. Among wartime shortages are both bleaches and dyes. Hence the new popularity of natural fabrics. Depending upon the material itself, these naturals range from warm beige tones into soft greys, some fairly dark, others almost white. Suits made entirely of one of the undyed fabrics are very smart when worn with bright accessories.

Plums Make Conserve

Less sugar is used in some sweets than in others. Conserve is one of those favorites, practical for winter use.

PLUM CONSERVE
4 pounds plums
1 cup seeded raisins
3 oranges
Sugar
Juice 1 lemon
½ pound walnuts

Wash plums, halve and remove stones. Slice oranges very thin, add to plums and add ¼ cup sugar to each cup juice and fruit. Cook slowly 45 minutes until thick, stirring to keep from burning. Add lemon juice and nuts and pour into sterilized jars. Large shallow pan is best for cooking.

Ginger Flavor For Pears

Ginger pears are a good sweet to add to the list of foods of the canning closet shelves.

GINGER PEARS
4 pounds sliced pears
6 cups sugar
4 tablespoons green ginger root
2 lemons

Choose hard green pears, peel and slice very thin. Cut ginger root into small pieces and sprinkle with lemon juice. Cover pears with sugar and let stand for several hours. Place over slow fire and simmer, add ginger root and juice and a little grated lemon rind. When clear and very thick, remove from fire and pour into sterilized jars; seal hot. Slices of pear should remain whole and almost transparent.

Latest Hats Feminine but Chic

The purely feminine and at the same time the truly chic has always been the trend of French designers. And this year, with its many evening dates that are not occasions for dressing but very definitely are times for a lady to look her loveliest, this type of hat is going to be the favorite of American women for afternoon and night. Some of the trends noted were a curving cascade of trimming on the forehead, cupping over the pompadour and reaching to a point between the eyes. Transparent heights achieved by fattering choux of veiling, loops of cords, fur or ribbons set in the top of conservatively high crowns, gave a young look to the high-fashion already indicated this year. Fringe cord, and tassels used in unique ways as trimming was also indicated. And fur hats of every description are going to be used for every occasion. The three hats shown in the above photographs are excellent examples of these smart and dressy hats. The fur hat is made of sable and perches far forward over the eyes. It is perfect for wear with a suit or dress. It has a band of grosgrain ribbon around the crown that terminates in gay bows at both the back and front. An ultra feminine dotted veil completes the trim. The off-the-face informal dinner hat is made of felt with a flattering arrangement of dotted veil and black velvet trimming. It is particularly becoming with the pompadour. The third style is a tiny affair made of a bit of black velvet from the crown with heaps of black veiling dotted with shocking pink spots and a sprinkling of black velvet bows. It is perfect for days off in town, and will be seen from luncheon to evening.

General's Daughter

She Keeps Home Fires Burning

Wide World Features

BERKELEY, Calif.—While Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell is leading American troops in China, his pretty daughter Alison is proving an effective liaison officer between the Chinese and American peoples.

This is chiefly through the medium of her paintings in the Chinese manner. She has had sixteen exhibitions in California and New York. In her lectures and demonstrations she has done a good deal for United China relief and for the "California college in China."

This latter, which describes itself as a "refugee guest college," operated in Peiping for 30 years. Now its fugitive faculty has been granted a building on the University of California campus and official university sponsorship. Its staff consists of ten Chinese and eight Americans.

Teaching of the Chinese language is the principal item of the curriculum.

Born in Peiping, where her father was military attache, Miss Stilwell remains American in appearance and manner but her cultural alliance with China is manifest in her paintings.

These are largely of flowers, landscapes and orientals in flowing robes. Some are treated to give the faded appearance of antiquity.

She is now 21 and has been doing Chinese painting since she was 15. Among her teachers was Prince Pu Ju, a celebrated exponent of traditional Chinese art.

"My father's main desire in life was to lead a Chinese army," she says. "Now he is leading one, and in spite of setbacks and hardships I am sure he's in the right place."
