Pattern

There's something arrestingly new about Pattern 4154 by Anne Adams. The surplice bodice lines are nicely accented by long revers. Buttons at the side-front placket give a jaunty air to the panelled skirt. The three-quarter sleeve version is smart with contrast cuffs and collar.

Pattern 4154 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3 3/4 yards 35 inch.

Send 10 cents for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly size, name, address and style number. Be strictly patriotic—with our Summer Pattern Book. Here are fabric-saving, distinctive styles for every occasion. Every size. And each design is easy enough for beginners. Send 10 cents for your copy! Women Workers

They May Win the War

It is the policy of the war department to use women employees in all capacities for which they are qualified or may become so by training, the war department announced today. As far as practicable, women will be employed in preference to men of war service age or capabilities. However, this policy will not limit the employment of qualified men who are ineligible for military service by reason of age or physical disability.

War department employing and training officers have been directed to "fully utilize, immediately and effectively, the largest and potentially the finest single source of labor available today—the vast reserve of woman power." The ability, the spirit, and the determination which women war workers have already shown can leave no doubt of the part they are playing and will play to win this war, instructions to the employing officers stated.

Already about 300,000 women are employed in war department activities, and as many more can be absorbed. They work in arsenals and depots, producing and assembling guns, planes, tanks and ammunition. They are running 15-ton cranes, operating complex milling and boring machines, driving trucks, riveting airplane wings and filling hundreds of other mechanical jobs, as well as doing clerical and supervisory work.

Through the employment of women in these posts, thousands of men have been freed to serve in the armed forces or in other vital war production lines for which women are physically unfitted.

Since June 1, 1942, when about three per cent of the skilled workers employed in war department activities were women, the percentage has been raised to almost 10 per cent, officials said. Almost 35 per cent of the unskilled workers are women, with indications that this number will be greatly increased as soon as possible.

Generally, women workers must meet the usual civil service requirements as to age, physical condition, mechanical aptitude and intelligence quotient. Age limits for most jobs are 18 to 50 years, although there is a maximum of 45 years in a few occupations, requiring unusual qualifications.

In regard to physical qualifications, department officials explained that varying standards must be met, the requirements differing according to state and federal laws governing employment of women.

There is no bar to married women, beyond the legal requirements which must be met by all.

Women without previous mechanical experience receive a training period of from nine to 12 weeks, depending upon the occupation, at the place of employment. They are paid during this period, and, in general, may expect a higher civil service rating and increase in pay at the end of their first year of employment.

All civil service ratings now, officials stressed, are for the duration of the war. They are not permanent ratings.

A study of women in war production jobs has definitely established that they possess required aptitudes and traits which make them successful in occupations heretofore regarded as men's work. They have proved adept in operations requiring finger dexterity and attention to detail, aptitudes essential in most of the skilled and semi-skilled occupations in war department production.

It has been learned, for instance, that women can fill numerous jobs in ordnance plants turning out machine guns, rifles, pistols and ammunition; in chemical warfare plants working on gas masks and other assembly jobs; in signal corps plants on radio and other communication equipment; in the transportation services, general depots and air service commands.

One of the largest employers of women is the quartermaster corps, where they work on almost everything from hand-embroidered battle flags to 10-ton motor trucks, including inspection of food, clothing and other articles of military equipment. The quartermaster corps operates the largest single clothing manufacturing establishment in the United States, yet must farm out to private firms 95 per cent of its uniform contracts. Inspectors are needed to check on production of these contractors.

The field of inspection work will require thousands of women as minor or junior inspectors

The bride wore a jacket dress of navy blue, ornamented with white braid. Her accessories were navy blue and she wore a corsage of pink rosebuds.

Mrs. James O'Daniels (Margaret Anderson), the bride's attendant, wore a frock of turtan with matching accessories. Her corsage was white gladioluses.

Lieutenant E. A. Johnstead, brother of the bride, flew from Fort Knox, Ky., to attend the groom.

Mrs. Johnstead and Mrs. Grabenhorst wore navy blue and corsages of yellow gladioluses.

Following a brief honeymoon, the couple returned to Salem where they plan to make their home until Mr. Grabenhorst is called into military service.

The second student, Jim Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Smith, was also a member of the honor society, of the Snikpoh dramatic society and Hi-Y.

Miss Veta Smith, third student to win a scholarship, was active in the honor society of which she was president. She also served as editor of the Clarion annual. She was a member of the Snikpoh society and the Civics club and was chosen as a candidate by the DAR in Salem to the good citizen pilgrimage.

War-Time Frocks Slim and Sleek

Left to right, two-piece rayon crepe dress; slim black frock; gray blue rayon crepe frock. You'll need to watch the curves this season. The new fabric-saving L-35 styles have no puffs or folds or nice full skirts to hide your figure faults; on the contrary, their slim, sleek lines are definitely figure-revealing. Since only harmonious body lines will do justice to gowns which accent the waistline, swathe the hips, and depend on a good bustline for the grace of their bodice draping, your foundation garments must do the job of sculpturing your torso. The three outfits shown in the above photographs definitely show how important slim lines are going to be for the new clothes. The close-haul styling which distinguishes the smart black frock makes a well-curved figure a pre-requisite for an attractive appearance. Simple lines, with tucked skirt front and soft draped neck, accent the chic patterning of the fine rayon matelasse crepe. Another figure-revealing model that has flattering feminine styling is the two-piece, slender-lined daytime frock of soft draping matte finished rayon crepe. The bodice is smooth, and the hip and skirt lines have a molded treatment. The third dress is an attractive interpretation of the wartime silhouette. It is made in fine gray blue rayon crepe, with triple folds of self-fabric used to accent the long torso styling. The closely molded line of the matelasse bodice and slim skirt makes good corseting a must for the woman who would do justice to its sleek charm.—International Illustrated News.

In the near future, officials said. Candidates for these posts must meet a higher educational standard than in the mechanic learner class, in which most women begin. In some cases, inspectors must have college training in physics and chemistry.

Applications for positions in war department activities must be made at the place of employment. Virtually all of the major activities have civil service boards empowered to grant civil service ratings and place the successful applicant in training for her share of the war effort immediately.
