Salem high's basketball Viks had to call on two long field trys-one tremendous cast by Guard Eldon Farlow and another position as he difficult one-hander from a side by Forward Martin Svarverudglanced at the in the dying minutes of a hot-paced hoop clash Tuesday night to eke out a 36-34 win over a sharpshooting Chemawa Indian quint, visiting the Vik Villa from the neighboring Duration league. The Indians, renewing athletic rivalry with Salem after a lapse of two years, all but knocked the brand new Vik winning streak ice cold at two games.

Coach "Lefty" Wilder's Redskins gave out with a sizzling rally themselves at the outset of the third quarter, which started with Salem leading 21-16. George Walters commenced things with a stupendous thrust from deep in a corner and then center Harvey Whitford, held to four points in the first half, put on a one-man show with his left-handed howitzers and brought the Indians up to a 24-22 deficit. Bob Edden tied it and then Whitford sent Chemawa ahead with another of his pivet-push specialties.

The only points Salem could garner the whole period were made on a two-pointer by Farlow, a gift toss by Bill Ransom and two of the same by Travis Cross near the end of the period the go-by from his own league, he which brought Salem to a 26-31 count behind the visitors.

Svarverud took over the scoring limelight in the last period. and with two goals from the field and a free toss brought the Viks to within two points of the Indians with five minutes left.

The tempo of the thrill-filled game hit a high pitch at this juncture, and after exchanging races up and down the floor Farlow canned his long one to shove the Viks in front, 34-33. Gordy McMorris had made good a free toss to make it 33-32 moments before.

The Indians were giving the Viks such a good go of it that the latter took their sixth time out Barrett had a challenge from Hal and were penalized with a tech-Beach coastguard station, lushing Seattle's outstanding "two-man nical foul. Whitford was high man with his 12 markers, followed by Svarverud's 11 and McMorris' 10. Williams was also undoubtedly the outstanding player on the floor and lived up to his reputation as a super ball-handler. His accurate passes really set up most of the Redskin points and he hooped eight himself. On two or three occasions, he rifled passes to mates who were all alone in the "hole" but fumbles by the latter nullified would-be einch

Pasadena Bowl Fails to Awe Georgia Club

They weren't over-awed by the movie studios, or the attention they got anywhere else. They weren't over-awed

Tuesday, as they got their first glimpse of the Rose Bowl. And it's a pretty safe bet they won't be over-awed Friday, when they do battle with UCLA's Bruins in that same Rose Bowl. The pressure is almost certain to be on the Bruins. For one thing, the Georgians are veterans. They've played together for four years, most of them. Sophomore Charley Thippi is the only upstart, and it's still doubtful whether he'll be in the starting lineup. The invaders are even Bowl veterans. They tore Texas Christian apart in the Orange Bowl last year. On the other hand, this team of Bruins not only hasn't seen the Rose Bowl-except maybe in the audience-neither has any other UCLA team. And the Bruins are definitely fidgety.

It was light drill for both squads Tuesday, as the coaches tried to do no more than keep their charges in top condition. The Georgians cavorted around the big saucer in Arroyo Seco, while the Bruins remained at their home field in Westwood. Wednesday they too will move here, to get the feel of the turf.

Ruffing Now On New Club,

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 29-(AP) The Yankees of New York lost their star pitcher Tuesday to a pigger Yankee crew-the army. Charles Herbert Ruffing, mound mainstay of the oft-times champions was certified 1-B after a medical examination, and goes in for non-combatant duty.

A coal mine accident in Nokomis, Ill., when he was only 15 kept Ruffing, known to baseball fans as Rufus the Red, from A 1-A classification. He lost four toes in the mishap, but went on to become one of the game's great hurlers. Last fall he completed 19 years in the major leagues, 13 of them with the Yanks.

Red, his 6 feet, 2 inch frame and 234 pounds dominating the room, reported Tuesday for his selective service physical, There was no fanfare, and even some of his close friends didn't know that the 37-year-old flinger had received his induction papers.

He has been working since shortly after the end of the baseball season at the Vultee Aircraft factory in nearby Downey. His home is in Long Beach.

Aside from his foot, said Lt. Hal C. Jenkins, chief medical examiner, Ruffing was physically 'A-1 in every respect." How did he like the prospect of going in? "There's only one way to feel," he said. "We've got a difficult battle on our hands." He added that he's "just about tired of baseball anyway." Ruffing made his major league debut with the Boston Red Sox in 1924 and still was a good enough hurler to be Manager Joe McCarthy's mound choice for the opening game of the 1942 world series. He remained with Boston until May 6, 1930 when he was traded

Durdan, a southpaw with an un-erring hook-shot, paced both teams with 14 points on six baskets and two free throws. Michigan State's points were more evenly distributed, and center Fred Stone's eight markers on three baskets and a pair of gift shots were high.

The Spartans held a brief lead in the opening minutes of play on a pair of free throws by forward Ollie White, but the rangy Beavers soon loosed a heavy barrage and held at least an eight point margin most of the first half. Durdan plunked in five field goals and his last basket of the period gave Oregon State a 23-13 lead. The box score:
