Monday, February 15, has been designated "Service Men's Athletic Equipment Day" throughout the state, and it is requested that citizens of Oregon bring their equipment for donation to either the McKay Chevrolet company, Central fire station, corner of High and Chemeketa streets, or any church or school in respective neighborhoods on that date if not beforehand.

Secretary of State Robert S. Farrell, jr., executive committeenan of the athletic equipment drive in Salem and vicinity, has designated the Central fire station as an additional receiving depot for equipment donations. Although numerous citizens have already turned in considerable equipment in Salem since the drive began with last Monday night's Willamette university vs. Camp Adair Timber Wolves basketball game, it is believed that they will rally to the needed cause and get behind Salem's share in the drive 100 per cent.

If no old but useable equipment is obtainable, citizens are urged to make cash donations by check. Instructions will be given at either McKay's or the fire house.

gene sports department came by the discovery by accident. Here's how:

Seems that the 27 points Fred Quinn meshed against Oregon State over at Moscow a few days back prompted Hec Edmundson and George Varnell to looking up records, as they figured that 27 was the highest ever scored by a single player in a single game. And right they were, as they couldn't find where one player had bested that mark.

Hearing of this and remembering that Gale had tossed in quite a few points per game during his record-breaking year, the Register-Guard boys started thumbing the files and just for the heck of it totaled Gales's points first and counting 16 games of the '38 season. They added up to 193, and Turner was credited with 192 for the record

> Admitting the possibility of a typographical error in the box scores bearing Gale's scoring feats, the Eugene men are having an official investigation made.

Incidentally, Edmundson and Varnell found that the previous individual game scoring mark was made by Roy Williamson of Washington in 1939-25 points against Washington State. The Register-Guard historians Salem high's hoopsters return to counting No-Name league play knot that one up too, as they tonight with their return game at claim Gale pitched in 25 against Oregon City against the Pioneers. Incidentally the Tigers won the game, defeating the Bisons for the second time this season, 62

Heavy Hooping Dates for WU Start Tonight

With an unblemished Northwest conference slate, their reward if they win both times, or the fate of also-rans if they lose, Willamette's Bearcat hoopsters open their important two-game series with Whitman's crusading Missionaries on the university floor tonight at eight o'clock. Second game is set for the same time Saturday night. So far the 'Cats have emerged unscathed in two league tilts, both against Pacific, but face the Missionaries as definite underdogs since the Walla Walla quint happens to be the highest-scoring and fastest team to come from Whitman in many moons.

In 21 games thus far the Missionaries have scored 1035 points or a shade under an even 50 per contest average. Recently the wing-footed Whitman flyers caged out 59-52 and 68-42 wins over Portland university, a tri-ple overtimed 73-66 job over the University of Montana and Wednesday night scored 53 more points against Montana but got beat by one point. In the first Montana game the Whits meshed out the almost unbelievable total of 15 points in a single overtime period.

Six lettermen adorn the Whitman roster - Al Mar, the highest scorer in the conference last year "Slim" Somerville, "Tizz" Miller, Ralph Soper, Bill Williams and Ray O'Dell. Along with Mar, who Washington State college basketwas recently deferred by the army ball team, leaders of the northand returned to school, Williams, ern division, Pacific Coast con-Miller and Somerville have been ference, faced the loss of another player Thursday night—its most hitting the hemp with plenty of regularity this season.

Neither Can Afford To Lose if Hopes Are to Be Retained

OREGON STATE COLLEGE, Corvallis, Feb. 11-When Oregon State and Oregon's basketball teams open their season's series Friday night at Corvallis more than just beating each other's biggest rival will be at stake. Both clubs will be fighting to stay in the conference pennant race. The second game will be played at Each club has lost four game and an old proverb in the northern division says that no team can lose more than four games and win the champ ship. This proverb has held good since the formation of the league with the exception of last winter when Oregon State won the title with a record of 11 wins and five losses.

Should Washington or Washingon State win two straight in their series at Pullman this weekend. Oregon State or Oregon could go into second place in the standings by winning two. If one of the Oregon fives loses two straight this weekend, it will be virtually out of the race.

Coach Stats Gill has been concentrating on methods of breaking through the tight Oregon zone defense in practices this week. It will be up to guards Tom Holman and Lew Beck to detect openings for clear shots. Gill has also been attempting to muster enough strength under the backboards to offset Roger Wiley's, Duck's 6-foot 71/2-inch freshman cen-ter, great height advantage.

The Beavers will not be in the best of shape for this important series. Forward Don Cecil was in the hospital from Monday to Wednesday with a bad cold and is just getting his strength back. Center Andy Anderson is still bothered by his shoulder which was sprained in the first Idaho series two weeks ago.
