

Interpreting The War News

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Wide World War Analyst for The Statesman

Prime Minister Churchill's war review in parliament was strikingly notable for its tone. It breathed a calm confidence in ultimate complete victory, of victory in Europe, perhaps, sooner than is generally expected.

In Two Raids

Secretary of Navy Knox is pictured upon his recent arrival at Pearl Harbor following a 12,000-mile flying tour of the Pacific battle area, during which he twice experienced Japanese air raids, once on Espiritu-Santo Island and once on Guadalcanal. Knox was not much impressed with the accuracy of the Japs' high level bombing. He visited all Pacific areas except Australia and New Zealand. He was accompanied by Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, and conferred also with Adm. William F. Halsey, commander of allied forces in the south Pacific.—Official US Navy photo by IIN.

Jeff High Letters Awarded Seniors Plan Graduation

JEFFERSON—The Jefferson high school held an award assembly February 5. The boys were awarded their football letters, those receiving them being Captain Gordon Turnidge, Gary Barua, Jim Henderson, Royal Hart, Robert Bruce, Jack Skelton, Dale Fish, Billy Henderson, Jack Knight, Don Cole, Austin Mays and Thomas Gee.

Cards were passed to those who had received them for scholastic work and the souvenirs of Oregon were distributed to the students who had purchased bonds between December 18 and January 30. After the assembly the juniors and seniors held class meetings. The seniors decided to wear caps and gowns; their class motto, "The higher we rise, the broader the view." Class color is blue and gold; flower is the Talisman rose. The play that the seniors selected is, "His Name Was Aunt Nellie."

war leader had something more to promise than blood, sweat and tears. He was promising action, aggressive, effective and quick action to smash the foe everywhere. He could not and did not promise victory in 1943. Yet he left no doubt that in his own mind and that of President Roosevelt, and in the judgment of the Anglo-American staff which assembled at Casablanca, planned events of the next nine months will see the axis in Europe tottering toward its fall, not in Russia alone but everywhere.

The mood of that Churchill address caught almost as much attention as his specific revelations. He told of a merged Anglo-American land, air and sea command in the western Mediterranean sector. He gave a brighter progress report on the U-boat menace. He afforded the first real glimpse of the overwhelming allied numerical odds piling up in Africa and the Near and Middle East to sweep the axis out of Tunisia and invade the Hitlerized continent of Europe. He dramatically reaffirmed Britain's pledge not to halt her all-out war effort until Japan, too, succumbed.

Yet most of all it was his buoyant confidence that the end is in sight, even if dimly and distantly as yet, and the solemn commitment he voiced to aid Russia and aid her now, that must have caught the ears of his listeners. His new declaration of faith in allied victory was unusual even for a man whose resolution has never wavered. It has a meaning all its own.

It is easy to see why the Casablanca decision to merge all allied forces in French Africa under the supreme command of General Eisenhower was not disclosed until Churchill could reveal it to parliament. British traditions fall by that elevation of a non-British, even though French Africa from the outset has been set off, for political as well as military reasons, as what Churchill termed the "American sphere."

Seasoned British veterans, men of high rank and proven skill, are grouped under Eisenhower. Alexander, who becomes second in command, is such. Yet French sensitivity in Africa obviously necessitated the choice of an American for supreme command of the western Mediterranean sector.

ed is, "His Name Was Aunt Nellie."

At the junior class meeting, it was decided to have an amateur hour May 12. This is to raise money for the class fund.

An all-day clinic was held at the school Thursday. Fuel oil registration will be held February 15, 16 and 17 at the Jefferson high school. The hours will be from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. The foods registration will be from February 21 to 28. Fuel oil application blanks may be obtained from the dealers.

Students Buy Car, Drive Daily To High School

They include Wayne Louvre, Louise McDonald, Pauline Russ, Ronald Wood and Doris Stutthick. Several other high school students ride to and from high school with Ernest Redding, who is employed in the mill.

Bantaris Visit Relatives in South; Journey to Mexico

FAIRVIEW—Mrs. Toivo Bantaris and son, Richard, and Mrs. John Thiem have returned home from a very enjoyable trip to visit relatives at various California cities. At San Diego they visited Mrs. Bantaris' brother, Ferrel McKinney, who is in the United States army training. He had gained 38 pounds. Mrs. Thiem brought gifts from old Mexico.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. McKinney joined their daughter, Mrs. Bantaris, in the vacation. The group found residents of Los Angeles experiencing shortage of butter, eggs and meat, but chicken and fish were used for substitutes. They enjoyed the fresh fruit on trees.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl McKinney of Corvallis were Sunday guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kusti Setala.
