

Berry, Fruit Growers Talk Insecticides

Production of berries and stone fruits was discussed by approximately 75 growers at the morning and afternoon meetings held Friday in the Salem chamber of commerce. The meetings were called by Robert Rieder, Marion county agent.

While price ceilings have not been announced, the growers nevertheless look forward to a pretty good season, Rieder revealed. Shortage of rotenone will cause a little trouble, but substitutes of lime and nicotine on berries and lead arsenate and lime or lead arsenate and molasses on fruits are expected to keep pests under control. Lime sulphur and black leaf will be used for prunes.

Speaking on the insecticide shortages were Rieder, O. T. McWhorter and S. M. Zeller. A lead arsenate shortage may develop if gas is used in this war, they revealed.

Growers are worried about obtaining farm labor but foresee a good berry and fruit crop as little damage resulted due to unusual weather conditions this winter.
