

Welles Urges Plans to End Trading Bars

BOSTON, Feb. 25—(AP)—Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles, in an article written for the March issue of the Atlantic Monthly, urges the United States to begin planning now for a post-war world freed of stifling barriers to international trade, so that all men may enjoy "food, shelter, freedom, security and peace."

"The world will not be securely free from war until it is prosperous and fruitful," the under secretary writes. "No producing and trading nation—not even the United States—can be prosperous in a starving world."

Welles predicts that after the war the United States will be moved by "the plainest feelings of humanity" to furnish food, clothing, medicine and shelter to the peoples of Europe and much of Asia where "starvation, hatred and disease will be more widespread than ever before in modern times."

But this relief cannot continue indefinitely, the peoples of the devastated countries will have to rebuild the foundations of life and their efforts in this direction "and therefore the character of the new world which may emerge, will depend to an important extent on the attitude and policy, especially the commercial policy, of other nations and in particular of the United States."

"If we and the other undevastated countries intend to move consistently in the direction of rebuilding barriers to trade, then the European countries and China 'can move in that direction also and build their new economies upon that basis . . . ."

Concretely, he writes, "efficient and continuous production of useful goods and services, wise use and development of resources, and effective distribution and exchange are the necessary bases of freedom from want anywhere."

"Production, to be profitable and abundant, must be well situated. We shall not grow bananas well in the United States. The division of production in space, both within nations and between nations, is fundamental to the attainment of the standard of living of which the world is capable."

Welles makes clear that "no responsible statesman has proposed complete free trade for the United States, either tomorrow or in the measurable future."

What is proposed is agreed action . . . directed to the expansion . . . of production, employment and the exchange and consumption of goods . . . to the elimination . . . of all forms of discriminatory treatment in international commerce and to the reduction of tariffs and other trade barriers . . ."

Oddities . . . in the News

BIG SANDY, Tex.—(AP)—The pressure of other jobs forced John Prothro to resign from the county draft board.

His other jobs? City treasurer, tax collector, water superintendent, city secretary and collector for two utility companies.

SALT LAKE CITY—(AP)—Instead of money dropping from the envelope opened by the police record bureau—as is the custom in traffic violation cases—the offender's notification fell out with this verse:

"Roses are red, violets are blue,
I'm in the army and nuts to you."

UNIN, SC.—(AP)—Miss Mamie Hughes of New York visited her old home here. Hardly had she arrived when she fell and broke her hip. Her two sisters came back home, too. Each fell and broke her hip.

ROXBORO, NC.—(AP)—Triplet sons of James and Mabel Day, negro tenants of the Concord section, were taken, unnamed, to Lincoln hospital, Durham. The lack of names upset the orderly ways of the hospital. A nurse suggested Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. That's official now.

KANSAS CITY—(AP)—They want to ration fires around here, too. First, fire swept a coffee company plant recently and burned 10,800,000 potential cups of coffee.

Then flames destroyed between 10,000 and 15,000 new car tires and 1000 used ones in a rubber company's warehouse.

Uncle Sam's 'Circus' Tours To Instruct in Camouflage

By LEO BRANHAM

WITH THE US ARMY EIGHTH AIR FORCE IN ENGLAND (Delayed)—(AP)—Ordinarily it would be a bit early in the season for a circus, but Uncle Sam has one on tour in England.

Born of war, it's properties do not include wild animals, acrobats, clowns or horsemen, yet it travels in trucks and operates just like any "greatest show on earth." And it draws the crowds—earnest, attentive young fighting men who know that what they see and learn at this show will make them better soldiers and may someday save their lives.

Instructions in the art of camouflage, not entertainment, is the business of this circus. Lecturers, training films, charts and striking pictorial displays make up some of its sideshows. Its nearest approach to freaks are mud and paint-smeared doughboys in queer looking snapper suits which blend with the ground upon which they crawl.

This traveling show, the Eighth air force's camouflage school, is touring American air force stations teaching the troops how to hide or disguise themselves and their weapons.

With chicken wire, chicken feathers, steel wool, seaweed, rope nets, burlap, canvas and paint the school's personnel of former architects, engineers, artists and theatrical designers perform some amazing tricks. For instance:

You are standing on what once was a municipal golf course. Off to the right a few hundred yards away rises with gentle slopes a hill which stretches many acres. The elevation appears covered with dull green grass generously sprinkled with patches of brown. But it isn't a hill at all. It's a vast canopy of chicken wire and colored cloth covering a huge brick building in which men are busy at machines or pore over maps and papers at their desks. This masterpiece of camouflage is made more amazingly realistic by trees which seem to spring from the slopes of the flimsy canopy. Closeup, through the wire and cloth netting, one can see the tree trunks extending on down to the level ground.

If the casual observer only a few hundred yards distant is fooled, it's obvious how well such covering conceals military installations from aerial photographic observation.

Lt. Thomas B. Lee said members of the school's staff had perfected a net for hiding warplanes which may be erected in eight minutes and removed in six seconds.

Officers and instructors of the school, besides Lee, include Pvt. Charles H. Moeller, Baker, Ore.

Sheriff William F. Howell of Coos county said Arthur Frye, parolee from the state hospital for the insane at Salem, was being held for investigation.

Howell quoted Mrs. Berg as saying that Frye forced her husband to accompany him in a boat Tuesday night after wrecking their home while they were at work in their fields.

A Charleston, Ore., fisherman, J. A. Wages, was slightly wounded by a man who fired at him from ambush prior to Berg's disappearance. Frye also is being questioned as to this incident, Howell said.

Scroll Names Servicemen

LEBANON—A scroll was presented to the congregation of the Presbyterian church at their Sunday morning service bearing the names of the men of the church who are in the armed forces.

The center section that morning was reserved for the families of the men who are in the service and the sermon was shorter than usual, the remaining time being spent writing letters to the men. Those who have relatives in the army and navy wrote to them. The other members of the congregation wrote to any young men in the service in whom they were interested. Special stationery was provided with the names on the honor roll so each boy will have a copy.

According to Rev. J. H. Schmidt, this letter writing service has been held in only one other church in the United States.
