

SPORTS TRAIL

BY WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, March 18-(AP)—There's just one thing about those English war-time golf rules that puzzles us. They provide for the replacing of a ball moved by enemy action, but don't say anything about replacing the golfer.

This would seem to be quite an oversight as a ball might not move very far and could be found quickly and put back in its original position, with a slight accidental improvement of the lie, whereas the golfer, particularly if he has a good set of legs, probably would be six miles from there, in all directions, by the time a bomb blast had stopped echoing.

Otherwise, the rules are very clear, and after reading the set adopted by the Richmond golf club of London, as reprinted in the Professional Golfer of America, maybe it wouldn't be a bad idea to keep our traps—and not our golf traps—shut over our so-called hardships.

So you're one of those guys who can't putt if a fly walks across the green without wearing carpet slippers, or a humming bird starts humming in the next county?

Well, rule No. 7 at the Richmond club permits you to play another ball if your stroke is affected by the simultaneous explosion of a bomb, and you are penalized only one stroke.

So you are a little worried because the foursome behind you is pretty close and may drop a ball on your noggin?

Rule No. 3 states that position of known, delayed action bombs are marked by red flags at reasonable, but not guaranteed, safe distances.

So you're fretting about the possibility of having to tote your own bags because the caddies are totting guns?

Rule No. 1 requests players to collect bomb and shrapnel splinters to save the mowing machines from damage by these tokens.

It does seem that the English are going to have their golf even if a rule is made that a player must go through with a string of working firecrackers tied to his coat tail.

In fact, the conditions under which the English are playing rather puts the old balcony sign on the ancient idea that golf can only be played under strictly hush-hush conditions and that a spectator suddenly seized with an attack of hiccup should be rushed away as a menace to the game.

Maybe after the war we'll have to provide cheering sections for the British pros when they come over here, just to make them feel at home.

"I don't like the idea of being called a holdout," Musial said, "but I have sent my final letter to Mr. Bredon telling what I want, and the next move is up to him. He offered me a very slight raise over what I received in 1942."

Advertising Helps You "KNOW YOUR ONIONS"

FOOD is helping to win the war, and thousands of backyard victory gardens throughout America are making their important contribution to the health and safety of the nation.

One of the principal reasons why there are so many victory gardens, and why folks are learning to "know their onions," peas, carrots, beets, lettuce and other needed vegetables better, is because of the many valuable articles and literature on seeds, tools, fertilizers and other garden needs provided by advertising—the buying guide for every American Family.

Advertising is serving the war effort in many other ways, too... selling War Bonds... collecting scrap... filling blood banks... raising funds for the Red Cross, the U S O and other worthy causes.

Today, with shortages and rationing, and restricted use of the family car for shopping, the newspaper with its advertising columns plays a greater part than ever in our daily lives by keeping us informed on commodities and services available and where to obtain them under wartime conditions with greatest economy of time, money and transportation.
