

Civil Air Patrol Trains for War Service

Another of Salem's defense and war service organizations, Squadron 921-5 of the civil air patrol. The squadron has a trained personnel of 80 privates in addition to its heavy complement of commissioned and non-commissioned officers. The commander, Capt. Lee U. Eyerly, stands fourth from left in the front row.

Salem CAP Not Grounded Though Their Aircraft Are

Considerable interest has been shown the Salem civil air patrol squadron by CAP officials due to its growth and progress in training, regardless of the fact that as yet all CAP planes located west of the Cascades are grounded. As there is now some talk of the civil air patrol being taken over by the army air corps, flying will probably be resumed this summer. Numerous promotions have already been earned by the victory corps members.

Germans See SE Defenses

By The Associated Press.
The German people are now being shown a new reel of a "modern defense system" of coastal fortifications built up by the Nazi army in the last two years in southeastern Europe, fortifications mounted by "new divisions equipped with new heavy arms," the Berlin radio said Wednesday night as recorded by the federal communications commission. The defense lines extend to Crete and have been under construction since the defeat of the Yugoslavs and Greeks. "New divisions equipped with new heavy arms have only recently been transported to these 'fronts,'" said the broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press.

The newsreel shows anti-tank defenses, camouflaged gun positions and barbed wire entanglements on Crete, which the Nazis won by aerial and sea attack, the broadcast added.

Tires for the Tunisian Front

Among the tremendous quantities of supplies being unloaded by Americans for the use of US troops and their allies on the Tunisian front are these rubber truck tires on a dock at Oran, Algeria. Trucks, tanks and other weapons of war which arrive in sections are put together on an "assembly line" on the docks.—Associated Press Telemat.

Since its completion the highway has unofficially become known as the "Alcan highway" which recently drew criticism from Dimond who said it sounded too much like "ashcan."
