Steel Plates and Performance

The same day that the news broke of the faking of analysis reports on sheet steel manufactured at Irvin works of Carnegie-Illinois Steel company, a subsidiary of United States Steel corporation, this office received a copy of the annual report of the corporation. Without defending the company for shipping any off-grade steel plate for use by the navy or maritime commission, we are sure from a reading of the annual report of the corporation that it has made a great contribution to the war. President Perry of the company declared the falsifying of reports was without the knowledge of the higher management. Slipping the plates through may have been due more to pressure for deliveries than greed for profits. Ships, more ships has been the incessant cry; and it will not be surprising if flaws both in production of materials and fabricating them are discovered.

US Steel for instance has lost 70,000 workers to the war and has had to train 100,000 new workers as substitutes and for new jobs. Scarce-Iv a plant in the country is not in trouble because of inferior quality production due to green help.

Look now at the better side of the US Steel

The corporation produced in 1942 over 30 million tons of steel ingots which probably is more than the total production for Germany and Japan together. Its shipbuilding subsidiary completed more destroyers for the navy in shorter building time than any other yard in the country. Its inventors perfected a steel landing mat new used for airplane landing fields even on boggy ground. They also helped perfect welding permitting the production of welded tanks. The prices it received for its products are about the same as in 1939; its composite price was two per cent lower than in 1929 while its average cost of labor per hour was 58 per cent higher.

While the gross earnings of US Steel were the highest in its history-close to two billions of dollars; its net earnings for its stockholders were lowest except in two years, per dollar of sales of any year when earnings were reported. Of the increase in receipts over 1941, wages to workers took 25 per cent, taxes 21 per cent: dividends to stockholders were the same, but the residue to be carried forward was 78 per cent less than in 1941. The net return on its capital investment was $71,800,000, which is less by nearly 20 million dollars than back in 1902 the first year of the company's operations.

Out of the 1942 gross earnings workers received $783 millions, government in the form of taxes $204 millions, the preferred stockholders $25 millions and the common stockholders $35 millions

Who own the United States Steel corporation? The books show that the capital stock is held in 218,465 names. Of these 15,482 are charitable and educational institutions, fiduciaries, insurance companies, etc, and 12,757 are brokers, holding for account of others. Most people will be amazed to know that of the individual stockholders, there are practically as many women as men: 95,110 women holding 3,225,000 shares of stock to 95,136 men with Operating a great corporation like US Steel. is really a trusteeship. Its managers now are turning out products, and for the most part high quality products for military purposes. They also must respect the rights of labor, and the corporation has accepted the rulings of the war labor board even when they ran counter to company policy. They are also stewards for the investment of thousands of people who depend on bond interest or dividends for their own support.

It is not enough, therefore to complain over the imperfect plates the company shipped, reprehensible as that is. The other side of the ledger should be examined, and there a creditable performance on a vast scale is indicated.

The White-Headed Eagle

Old Oregon Trail Centennial Series No. 8

The Hudson's Bay Fur company and the Northwestern consolidated in 1821, under the name of the former. Not liking the surroundings at Fort George a site was chosen farther up the river where a fort was erected and christened Fort Vancouver by Governor George Simpson on March 19, 1825. Dr. John McLoughlin was placed in charge as chief factor of all the "Oregon Country". He had a tall, commanding presence, with a mane of snow-white hair which fell to his shoulders and the Indians called him the "White-Headed Eagle". He was monarch of all he surveyed and ruled with an iron hand, though a kindly one. McLoughlin married Margaret McKay, widow of Alexander McKay who was killed on the Tonquin. Four children were born to them: John, Eliza, Eloise and David.

The White-Headed Eagle was a business man as well as a fur trader. He built sawmills and gristmills, established dairies and carried on a large trade along the Pacific coast and in the Hawaiian islands. The fur magnate imagined that the Rocky mountains presented an insurmountable barrier to wagons and the colonization of the Oregon Country. When the historic wagon train of 1843 reached the Columbia and floated down stream to Fort Vancouver, the White-Headed Eagle saw the handwriting on the wall. Disregarding profits, McLoughlin supplied the needy emigrants with food and clothing, thereby ng much suffering and many deaths. He etired from the Hudson's Bay company in 1846 and took up residence at Oregon City. His last days were not happy ones. He was condemned by the British for his kindness to the Americans, and was censured by the Americans who called him a Britisher, though he had taken out citizenship papers. On September 3, 1857, the White-Headed Engle settled to earth and was laid to rest beside the falls ell. Doubtless he went to his grave a because of the base ingratitude of

Like a Tree Planted

The composer of the first Psalm wrote a poem which fits the late Rev. E. S. Hammond, who served for twenty years as professor at Kimball School of Theology in Salem:

"Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful.

"But his delight is in the law of the Lord: and in his law doth he meditate day and night. "And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.

Firm in his religious convictions, Mr. Hammond was nonetheless kindly and tolerant. He loved his fellow-men, and sought always for their uplift. Good works were the fruit of his long life, and his innate kindliness the memory which his friends long will cherish.

Herman Oliver, leading stockman and citizen of central Oregon topped off a long record of fine service on the state board of higher education with a term on the state highway commission. His term ends and the appointment goes to Arthur W. Schaupp, Klamath Falls attorney. Mr. Oliver proved a capable member of the highway board. He was well known all through eastern Oregon and the people had the utmost confidence in his judgment and fairness. During his term marked strides were made toward completing the surfacing of the primary road system in eastern Oregon. Now only a few gravel gaps remain, which probably will not be closed until the war is over. Mr. Oliver can retire with the satisfaction of having done a good job. The change is due merely to the dictates of politics.

Tom Ray, boss of the boilermakers' union, has changed his mind on the length of the workday for shipbuilders. He was plugging for a ten-hour, two-shift day. Now, on his return from a trip across the country he recommends the eight-hour day, six days a week. Under the working conditions and travel conditions which prevail in the Portland area his latter proposal is more sensible. When you add to the eight hours of work five hours of travel for many yard workers the day is plenty long. If the workers could be housed conveniently close to the yards then they could do the ten-hour turn. But that isn't true in Portland.

The most welcome call this spring will be:

News Behind The News

By PAUL MALLON

(Distribution by King Features Syndicate, Inc. Repre-tion in whole or in part strictly prohibited.)

WASHINGTON, March 25-The congressmen have been getting so many letters from back home that the administration's opposition to the Ruml plan is likely to be formal. Speaker Rayburn and Floor Leader McCormack are talking anything but tough to the democratic members, and, while there is no question of their sincere desire to follow the leadership of ways and means committee Chairman Doughton, they realize it cannot be done.

The best they are likely to get are some modifications yet to be worked out.

Probably the greatest obstacle they have faced here is the fact that influential Mr. Doughton has saved the money for his next year's taxes wisely and prudently, and he has not been sympathetic about the viewpoint of others who were not able to do so, or who were not so prudent or wise. The treasury opposition has been based ostensibly on the idea that the rich would be helped. But that attitude also may possibly have softened somewhat by the fact that the March 15 income tax returns did not anywhere come up to expectations and bonds were cashed in large quantities to make them. The figures suggested that people were unable to meet the current revenues, much less attempt to meet the committee proposal to lure double payment of taxation this year with 6 per cent

However, Representative Frank Carlson, republican, of Kansas, has estimated that the tadpole bit of 6 per cent discount small as it is, would cause possibly 5,000,000 people to borrow a billion dollars this year.

This, however, would benefit only those who had sufficient credit to borrow at less than 6 per cent from a bank.

It would only solve the problem of the man who has cash at hand, not necessarily the rich man, whose taxes this year are terrific, or in bonds (including government).

These necessary war taxes are equally burdensome on all. It causes the rich man just as much difficulty to raise say $10,000 at his high rate of taxation by comparison with his income, as it does the poor man by comparison with his $25 a week. The rates, vary, but it is no easy burden for anyone to carry.

Under these circumstances, the rank and file of democrats have broken away from house leadership and Rayburn and McCormack have been required to face the situation to get the best they can,

The question of where Jim Farley is going with the support he has been organizing has been puzzling a number of the higher politicos. Some of the republicans have been suggesting that he would look good as vice presidential candidate on a ticket with Governor Bricker, of Ohio, for instance. So far as anyone around here has been able to Staff Sgt. Sam Sarpolus (above) detect, Mr. Farley's work, whatever it has been, has been in favor of himself. A coalition with the republicans presumes a merger all down the line of the anti-Roosevelt democracy, and whether it could be completed or not, is a question, and there are others in the party with substantial personal followings, includi-

Virginia, and the favorite son senators. The idea may not jell, but it is being talked around.

.Therefore there seems to be stification for the belief that he German counter-offensive in the Ukraine has just about run its course. Thursday Moscow reported a slackening of the enemy's pressure along the Donets may be approximately that from and even the Berlin communi-que described the fighting there as of only local importance. Isunched.

German success in the Ukraine comeback, while considerable. has not been complete. It prevented the winter campaign from being an unmitigated nazi disaster, it salvaged a portion of some of the choicest territory gained in 1941, but left unanswered the question whether Germany or Russia will hold the initiative when the spring phase of the war in the east opens.

It may be that the Germans intend to stand and fight for Smolensk and that they have fust about reached the line they chose for this purpose when they abandoned the Rzhev-Gzhatsk-Vyazma salient, Today's front Chapser 36 continued "Fiddlesticks! Ever heard of a woman giving away a man she's in lose with?" The astute dowager's glance flicked Amy. "Wild horses couldn't have dragged it out of Stella, up to her snooping experition last night. That seems to have been the drop too much." But hen she certainly did get an earful, when she crawled after her that Curtis all through the dark woods back of your garden, Amy, my child."

"Oti!" said Amy. Just "Oh!"
"Yes, Oh!" Mrs. Libby mimicked. "And I'm glad she got scared enough to tell on him. Though in a way it struck me as funny: Avery being as afraid of Stella as she was of him. It seems realizing she knew had given him awfully cold feet. Anyway, it changed all his plans. Where he'd expected to stay and play up to Kay, he now wanted to run, with Amy. And in his excitement he was incautious and let the cat out of the bag; let her see he'd done the two murders sad was ready for a few more to kill Kay for the stone and the much-talked-of envelope and his dearly beloved wife for -well, you might say, the pleasure of it." She suddenly beamed on Amy. "My hat's off to you, child. From what Stella said, you did exactly what I would have done in your place: kept your head and told him off, even when he threatened to add you to lik victims, in case you'd get the notion of running to the police. Stood up to him and told him you'd not allow any more murders wouldn't let him go near Key."

There was dead silence in the room when Mrs. Libby pausedto let her disclosures sink in. No one said a word. Least of all Amy. And after awhile Mrs. Libby went on:

"I must say, I was flabber-gasted. The idea! Stella coming to me with her story, instead of calling the police Well, I gave her a piece of my mind and rang you up. The rest you know."
"Yes, she rest we all know."

the Inspector nodded. "Except one thing, Tell me, Miss Amy: what did you think would happen to you-afterwards?" "You'd put me in prison," Amy said simply. "I—didn't like the idea; I tried to—to double-cross Curt and call you up last night. But I couldn't. I-just couldn't. So-you'd better arrest me now." "Stop talking nonsense. I told you once, you been mighty helpful bringing the murderer to justice and maybe saving Miss Kay's life," the inspector told her with assumed grimness. "There's nothing more to say. This case is closed. Thank heaven the grand jury's in session, and it'll all be over soon. Be seeing you, on and out the witness stand, I hope." And that is the end of my story about the murder in the empty to Allan, then Allan and I will witness his marriage to Gala. And later we'll go on separate honeymoons and come back to live in this lovely old house. Allan and I for keeps, in this ground-floor apartment. And Dad and Gala upstairs. Temporarily, and as our guests.

For the house belongs to me now, all of it. Gala made my taking it over one of her conditions when she accepted a share of the Burton inheritance. Because, after all, her home will be wherever the government sends Dad, while Allan and I will live here for years—as long as he remains the head of the shipyard.

We didn't want it. Neither Gala nor I had the desire to be reminded of our past mistakes and two horrible murders each time we looked at the ugly bulk. moment the estate is settled, in time for the spring planting, we hope, so that the space it took up can speedily be made into a part of the garden.
