OPA Director Tells Rotarians Clothing Rationing Probable

WOODBURN—Paul A. Hale, field director of the OPA, spoke before Rotary club members at a meeting held Thursday noon at Chet's Place.

Mr. Hale discussed rationing, from the head office in Washington, to the consumer. He said that the heads of the OPA are not the ones to decide on amounts to be allotted each person. And he emphasized that the people themselves are responsible for the rationing of some articles, because of the tendency to hoard whenever they believe something will be rationed. This, according to Hale, hastened or even was the direct cause for the freezing of some goods. For this reason, he predicted clothes rationing.
