National Board To Control Drive

A national coordinating board for war fund and community chest drives is sending a representative to Portland for a conference with leaders of community chest organizations of Oregon next Monday. As understood here, the national board will have arbitrary power over the financial drives of the programs concerned. The meeting Monday has been called in order to enable planning for solicitation this fall.

Local organizations will henceforth have no part in determining which agencies are most worthy of support. The federal board will make the decision as to how much money shall be allotted to each war aid group.

The Salem war chest drive last year was similar to the program outlined by the new board although it functioned without coercion as to agencies.

Shipyard Workers To Leave Busses At Ferry Dock

Hundreds of shipyard workers in territory served by Oregon Motor Stages apparently will have to begin patronizing the US maritime commission ferry to get from downtown Portland to the Swan island and St. Johns yards, Ormond R. Bean, state public utilities commissioner, said Friday.

The commissioner explained that he apparently lacked authority to oppose a recent order by the federal office of defense transportation requiring the stage line to stop delivering workers directly to the yards and to substitute the maritime commission's new ferry terminal. The order becomes effective April 11.

"The plan is to load and unload Kaiser company workers at the west side ferry terminal, which is taken to mean that all workers, hundreds of them, from the up-river country—McMinnville, Forest Grove, Hillsboro, Beaverton, Newberg, Sherwood, Tigard, Oswego, Lakegrove and way points—will be compelled to use the ferries brought to Portland from San Francisco," a news release from the commissioner's office said, adding: "They are understood to have been suffering a lack of patronage."

Final week of March provided nearly all the month's rainfall of 6.73 inches, nearly double the average of 3.75 inches, according to weather bureau statistics. Official readings at 11:30 p. m., almost coinciding with the calendar, showed .24 inch on the 25th, .46 on the 26th, .15 on 27th, 1.10 on 28th, .43 on 29th, 1.11 on 30th and 1.58 on the 31st, a total of 5.06 inches.

Precipitation was 1.27 inches in March last year, 1.95 inches in 1941, 5.94 inches in 1940. The record here is 10.13 inches in March 1894. Lowest recorded is .59 inch in 1911.

Two Charged as Slot Machine Operators; Pinballs Seized

Two large pinball machines, labeled "for amusement only" but allegedly accustomed to paying off in cash and slugs, were taken into custody and $400 in bank notes collected from their alleged operators in a dinner-hour "raid" at the Brook Nook tavern, Brooks, staged by a single deputy from Sheriff A. C. Burk's office Friday night.

John Moore and C. W. Will each posted $100 bail on each of two charges of operating slot machines. The equipment, sealed with adhesive tape, was moved into Salem in a pickup truck, one machine at a time because of the size, and stored in the county courthouse basement.

Arrests and seizures followed complaint from three youths, whose mothers, officers said, had asked them to take action, and a conference between Burk and District Attorney Miller B. Hayden.

One young man declared he had recently put $164 into the machines, another that he had "invested" approximately $300 since last July. Complainers maintained that the machines had, at times, paid off in money, that once when a "jackpot" was struck much of the payment was in slugs although there was some coin.

One of the gaily-painted contrivances was in a back room at the tavern when the deputy called Friday night; the other, he said, was in the front.

Oregon law forbids the operation of such games for money or merchandise prizes.

No Tax Now, Says Sprague To Realtors

"We should lay off the sales tax for Oregon and concentrate on federal financing," Charles A. Sprague, former governor and publisher of The Statesman, suggested to Salem Realty board as he addressed the organization Friday at its weekly luncheon meeting.

Not opposed to the sales tax under all conditions, Sprague expressed himself as doubtful not only of its passage in November, 1944, but of the wisdom of a state "in good condition" seeking this new source of taxation when the federal government may be forced to use it.

Oregon's property tax burden has been cut with no funds from property taxes used by the state government for its institutions, he pointed out. Under the "Walker system," adopted by the recent state legislature and praised by the speaker, property taxes are cut 30 per cent from the 1929-30 high, he pointed out, while gift taxes have been reduced, the inheritance tax amended, and intangibles tax repealed, and arrangements made for a cut in the income tax even without a sales tax.

Praised by Sprague, as he discussed work of the legislature, was that body's action in killing the Jones wage bill, the one-man tax commission and the big truck bill, passing the Walker tax program, the Burke wine bill which places fortified wines in state liquor stores, the measure to raise the minimum pay for teachers and the placing occupational diseases under workmen's compensation.

"The cities have finally been given a share in highway funds and a portion of the liquor permit fee. I think they should share more generously in liquor commission proceeds," he declared, pointing out the increased cost of policing cities.

The pension question, when measured by the offerings of nearby states, is a continuing problem, he indicated, declaring that Oregon should pay what it can and not necessarily what California pays.

The "barbers' bill" and the judges' pension measure, the speaker termed "bad."

Speaking generally of the legislature, Sprague declared that it had been predominantly republican and so lacking in color, that he believed a vocal minority is needed for best results.

In the "doubtful merit" column of legislation he placed the financial responsibility act and the transfer of milk control to the department of agriculture.

Loses Favor?

OUT OF HITLER'S FAVOR is the uncomfortable position held by Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop if persistent reports from various sources close to Berlin are true. The rumor leads to the conclusion that either Ribbentrop is feuding with other members of the Nazi hierarchy or that Hitler desires a new minister as a preliminary move toward a "reorientation" of Nazi foreign policy. 'Secret Society' Pupils Expelled

PORTLAND, April 2—(AP)—Superintendent of Schools Ralph E. Dugdale Friday expelled four Lincoln high school students who he said were members of a secret fraternity, Rho Delta Delta.

He said state law prohibits secret organizations in high school and that similar treatment would be given other students found to belong to such groups.

Two of the students, Allan F. Goldsmith, 18, and Nesmith C. Ankeny, 16, were taken into custody by police yesterday after a brick to which a threatening note was attached had been thrown through a window of the school principal's residence.

Police said Goldsmith admitted tossing the brick and said it was done in an effort to force the principal to curb the authority of the high school's Hi-Y club.

Harrell and his wife were divorced when the son was 12. The wife remarried and the son took his stepfather's name.
