Observation Post Volunteers Needed

WEST SALEM - An urgent appeal is being made to West Salem residents to turn out for the mass meeting called by the fourth fighter command representatives from Portland, at which ways and means of properly manning the West Salem observation post will be discussed. The meeting will be Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the school gymnasium.

The necessity for volunteering to work at the post must be impressed upon citizens, especially with the hot summer weather and danger of fires drawing close, post workers declared. A system is being worked out whereby citizens will only have to stand watch for a six hour shift once in six weeks. But someone must man the post, officials warned, or what is volunteer work now may become an assignment backed up by 'aw.

Capacity Will Supply 48,000 Acres Now, Darley Reports

STAYTON - To increase the capacity of the West Stayton ir-rigation canal and to relieve backpressure on the water wheels re-sulting in an increased production of power for industrial purposes Herman Darley, manager of the Willamette Valley Water company, has been directing operations along one and one-half miles of the canal and announces the task nearly completed.

For 3500 feet westward from Jeter's swamp, the canal was deep-ened six weet and widened eight to ten feet several years ago. A similar improvement being made now extends eastward from the swamp to the headgates at the the quota in the first drive, would rear of the Charles Porter residence on Maple street.

It is rumored that A. D. Gardiner will begin similar work on the canal eastward from the Porte location to the power wheels the center of Stayton.

The former flow of 150 second feet will be increased to a capacity flow of 600 second feet, Darley reports. The company supplied water for 2200 acres last year and with the ditch widening, thinks to supply all of the 4800 acres now under water rights held by it. No increase in acreage is anticipated this year.

The main canal beginning at Stayton and emptying into Mill creek near Turner is 15 miles in length with laterals which total about 200 miles of canal and ditches.
