Physicians of the Mind

For the last quarter of a century and longer, the most popular philanthropy has been the promotion of public health. Great benefices of the wealthy, like the Rockefeller Foundation, the Spellman Fund, the Commonwealth Fund, have set the pace, which has been followed down the line to the purchase of a dime's worth of Christmas seals to help the campaign against tuberculosis. These donations, great and small have supported hospitals, laboratories, educational campaigns, expeditions all over the world to search out diseases, their cause and their cure. Hookworm in the south, malaria in Malaya, beriberi in Japan have been studied, and prevention or treatment prescribed by the ablest scientists that money could hire.

The results have been gratifying. The investments have paid large dividends in human health and happiness. Infectious diseases, like typhoid fever, have been routed. The nutrition of the people has been improved. The mortality rate for mothers and infants has been sharply reduced.

Yet, as the Rockefeller Foundation says in its recent annual report: "But just to keep men free of disease is not enough. Public health, a laudable object of endeavor, is not the whole of life." What also is needed is "a knowledge of rational human relationships." Thus the Foundation which has done more in the field of study, prevention and cure of disease recognizes the inadequacy of all these endeavors if man is to live happily on this earth. The mind, as well as the body, must be considered.

For war represents a breakdown in social astion. Political or economic or religious or racial or linguistic relations generate frictions which drive peoples into war. Then war itself induces fiercer hatreds, deepens prejudices, awakens instincts of revenge. Now we feed the fires of hate, we release those elemental passions which express themselves in physical force and onslaught. And the nourishment of the primitive instincts affects men's thinking in local spheres, working for the disintegration of society and order.

This is the day, and properly so, of the military mind and of the scientist and technician who best can serve the military purpose. Yet, for our conception of civilization, the war and the battle are not the end. They make possible peace which we regard as the desirable realm for human beings to live in. To prepare the mind of man for success in peace calls for a different instructor. As the Rockefeller Foundation report says:

"This is the task of the teachers, the philosophers, the clergy, the journalists, the statesmen, the poets, the novelists, the social scientists and all who search for universal values and totality of vision. Upon these men and women must rest the burden after the war for our mental disarmament, and for seeing that the welfare or mankind is not forgotten in the conflict of lesser loyalties."

We have heard many whose lives had been devoted to careers in education, law, journalism express the feeling that they were useless in the present great emrgncy. Perhaps they are, save as they can devote other skills to the war task. But their day will come. For we shall need these physicians of the mind and soul to serve humanity when the ordeal of war is past.

Late Easter

Although the event it celebrates shares with Christmas the distinction of being the high point of the Christian calendar, the word "Easter" is not found in the original text of the Bible. The use of the word in Acts 12:4 in the King James version is a mis-translation of the word "passover", which is not followed in later versions. But Easter is universally recognized as the anniversary of the resurrection of Jesus, the narrative of which is told in each of the four

While Christmas falls on a single date, Easter is a variable. April 25th, the date for 1943, is the latest date on which Easter may fall ander the present rule of calculation; and it will not come on that date again until the year 2038. The earliest date is March 22nd. The rule is that Easter comes on the first Sunday after the first full moon after the vernal equinox. March 22 thus becomes the fixed date for the calculation of Easter. The astronomers can project the date as far ahead as they like by determining when the full moon will come.

Easter, like so many things in the Christian ritual, was borrowed from the pagans. According to Bede, Eostre was the Saxon goddess of spring so the name was taken over, probably along with the pagan festival of the vernal awakening, and applied to the annual celebration of Christ's resurrection.

This year the Easter frills which help to make the day an enjoyable occasion are mostly absent. No candy Easter eggs or bunnies, no egg hunts, and probably fewer ham-egg breakfasts. And the display of finery will be greatly subdued. The sacred aspects of the day will therefore receive more consideration. And undoubtedly the preachers will dwell on the theme of hope for a world now sick with war. Accent also may be put on the durability of the message of religion which has survived wars innumerable. And the people themselves will derive inspiration out of hearing again the story of the resurrection, coming as it does after the dark story of the crucifixion. Life still overcomes death.

War Contract Map

Just as the airplane has forced us to get a fresh mental picture of the world as a ball and not as a flat plain, so the United States News loes a service in redrawing a map of the United States, giving each state a space measured not by its square miles but by its war contracts. And what a contorted map it is, the big bulge coming in the Great Lakes states, and Califor-The big states on this map are, in order of war no one to blame but themselves.-Astorian-Budget.

contract volume: California, Michigan, New York, Ohio, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Connecticut, Indiana, Texas and Massachusetts. Oregon, with its $730,000,000,000 in contracts is small potatoes between California with eleven and a half billion and Washington with three and a half billion. But there are other states which are only narrow slivers on the war pie: Montana, Wyoming, the Dakotas, the southwest

Such a map however is not a true picture of business prosperity. For important as the war business is, back of the war contract must be the supply from primary industry: food, fiber, minerals, lumber, coal. The war contract for cloth given a New Jersey textile mill calls for wool grown in Colorado or Utah or New Mexico. The contract for ships to be built in Maryland will call for iron ore from Minnesota and 'lumber from Oregon. The contract for a submarine in Connecticut will call for copper from Nevada and Montana. Thus the war business spreads out all over the country. Most states have all the "prosperity" they can take care of, and some communities too much, for with the prosperity have come headaches.

Champoeg Centennial

Next Sunday is Champoeg day, honoring the 100th anniversary of the famous meeting at Champoeg which formed a provisional government for the Oregon country. Under the auspices of the Sons and Daughters of Oregon Pioneers a suitable program will be given at Champoeg park in the afternoon. The principal speaker will be Dr. Howard R. Driggs, president of the American Pioneer Trails association, who is coming out from New York for the Willamette valley people have always taken great pride in pioneer history. While gas rationing will keep many at home, undoubtedly there will be a large crowd to assemble to give appropriate recognition of the important happening there of a century ago. Out of that beginning came organized government in the great northwest, laws a jail, a military establishment, a coinage, until in 1849 territorial government was set up here.

To carry the message of the centennial of the Champoeg meeting and the wagon train crossing of the plains the state Oregon Trail Centennial commission is encouraging the study of pioneer history in the schools, the holding of local celebrations, and devoting programs of civic and service clubs through 1943 to this theme. The war has stopped plans for large celebrations, but each community, each patriotic and civic body, should in some fitting way, observe this centennial.

Soldiers of the Cross

In the 1830's religion was in the air. The search of the Flatheads for the white man's Book of Heaven fired the imagination of all religious sects. The Methodists were the first to send missionaries to the Indians of the Oregon Country. Jason Lee headed the first missionary party, which left Independence, Missouri, on April 30, 1834, joining the Wyeth party for mutual protection. Lee preached the first sermon west of the Rockies at Fort Hall on July 27, 1834, to a motley group of Americans, French- Canadians and Indians. Lee established his first mission on the Willamette river near the present Gervais, and another, later on, at Wascopam (The

The ships Diana and Sumatra arrived in 1837, bringing additional recruits among them Anna Marie Pitman whom Lee married in an impressive ceremony, soon to have a tragic ending. Lee started east in 1838, bearing a petition to congress for recognition of the Oregon country. When at the Shawnee Mission in the present Kansas, a courier overtook him telling him of the death of his wife in Lee returned in 1840 on the Lausanne with "The Great Reenforcement" and there were then more missionaries than there were converts. With Lee was his new wife, the former Lucy Thomson. He lost her too in child-birth in 1842. Lee was deposed in 1844 and died in Canada the following year. Though his missionary efforts among the Indians were not successful, his colonization work brought better results. The Oregon Institute, founded at Chemeketa (Salem) in 1842, grew into the Willamette University of today. Lee's desire to return to the Oregon country was gratified when his remains were returned to Salem in 1906 and interred in the Mission cemetery, where also rest the remains of his former wives and several members of the Mission party. The Cross had been firmly planted in the Oregon county and more soldiers would come in later years to uphold it.

ASKING FOR REPRISAL

They never learn, apparently, that abuses bring drastic cures. We're referring now to the wine people who are starting a referendum against the legislative enactment which would forbid the sale of fortified wines except in state liquor stores. In reprisal Senator Burke, author of the act, has declared he will, if it is held up by the referendum, initiate another bill to probibit the manufacture or sale of these wines in Oregon and the Anti-Saloon league has announced a similar intention.

It will not be difficult to invoke the referendum the Burke bill since less than 10,000 signatures are required. Whether or not the wine people think the public will override the action of the legislature, the referendum will have the effect of holding up the operation of the act for a year and a half.

These people, who bitterly fought the bill at the legislature, do not seem to be conscious of the public prejudice against wines of strong alcoholic content. It is widespread and we confidently believe that the verdict of the voters will be strongly in approval of the legislative act to put the sale of such wines in state stores exclusively. Moreover, we believe that an initiative act to prohibit the manufacture and sale of fortified wines in the state would likewise be endorsed.

It has ever been thus with liquor. The abuses in its sale and regulation breed the sentiment which his. Texas is important, but its "dollar-area" results in prohibition. If the wine people are put shrinks in comparison with Ohio and Illinois. entirely out of business in this state, they will have

They Sell Sailors Elephants

New Novel by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan

It is reported that The Shamrock will be entered for the Handicap, if his next race in better company convinces Del Mar authorities that he has the class. Erin Go Bragh, the "missing twin brother," is still missing as we go to press. Joe Zilch, the old horse player, says he saw Erin Go Bragh in a rowboat off Point Loma.

"Blah! Wise guy!" "Yerse! Them newspaper guys ughta get a punch in the nose." Georgine rapped her knuckles on the tray. "Talk yourself outa this one!" she said, "I'm waiting with respectful attention." Seaman Linn blinked innocently.

"It's jest like he says, Georgie. We had everything set to sell him Erin Go Bragh for fi' grand, but he got smart at the last minute and wouldn't buy." "Yerse! His girl friend woont let him-"

"Pipe down, Tim!" "Aw-aw, what's that about his Benny looked coldly at Geor-

"Go get me a club sandwidge an' a stein of beer," he said. Fireman Dunnevan scowled at Millicent.

"Make it two. An' step on It-I'm orful hungry."

Georgine stood her ground. "This ain't Germany an' you ain't Hitler-not till you grow a funny mustache, Benny!" she said. "We knew you guys when you was a couple of gobs. So now you go high-hatty when we ask a simple question. Okay -if that's how you want it!" Millicent tried to make peace. "We wasn't butting in, Benny. Georgie jest thinks that if Sedgwick wouldn't buy on account his girl friend said no, maybe

"What give you the idea he's got a girl friend?" "Tim said he-"

this needs a woman's touch,

"Ner. I dint. I jest said-" "Don't waste breath arguing with sailors, Millie. How'll you take the sandwidges-with arsenic or rat- paste?"

Seaman Linn produced two $50 bills. He dropped one on Georgine's tray and the other on Millicent's tray.

"A funny little man makes those things," he said. "But he hears you astin' any more questions he'll get sore an' quit making those things. See?"

"Gee . . . thanks, Benny!" "Yeah . . . much gratitude," said Georgine.

Fireman Dunnevan chuckled. "Sedgwick, he gives Benny fi' hunnert- owwww-whut you punchin' me for, Benny?"

"I got an idea," said Georgine, "but I wouldn't discourage that

"Hips and brains!" Benny said,

Hence, it was on a note of optimism and in an aura of success that Seaman Linn and Fireman Dunnevan reported for duty aboard the USS Trimble, their five-day liberty ended. They had pyramided Tim's original legacy into $5438.50 net and this money was now deposited to the credit bank. They were still the nominal owners of The Shamrock and the actual owners of Erin Go Bragh. They had the Linn-Dunn Stable at Del Mar, a trainer and a jockey under contract. They also had a mascot, El Perla, down on the Fernandez farm.

Even Chief Mulcahy, his heart warmed by collection of a fivedollar bet on The Shamrock, greeted them cordially.

"Glad ye're back, boys!" he said. "'Tis famous ye are-with a fine horse an' silks of yer very own." Then, he dug his thumb into Seaman Linn's ribs: "I'm guessin, the word is to lay off Shamrock in his next start, eh? Won't have a chance, eh?" Seaman Linn spat cockily.

"You can't never bet on racehorses or women. Chief." he said. "All the percentages is against it!"

Chortling, the Chief gave Tim and Benny some good news. Yeoman Wester had lost twenty dollars betting against The Sham-"He couldn't believe ye'd get that horse's feet in shape overnight. An' faith, I don't understand how you did it, meself!"

"Force and brains, Chief!" But Tim's and Benny's cup overflowed when Lieut. Commander Herrick, halting near the ladder to officers' quarters, beckoned to them.

"Er . . . uh . . . Linn?" "Yessir!" "Good liberty?"

"Swell, sir!"

"I understand that horse turned out all right, after all?" "He sure did, sir. Won us a six hunderd buck purse." "Yerse, sir! We got fi' grand-"

"Pipe down, Tim!" Cap'n Herrick grinned. "Winner or not, I'd sell him the first good chance, Linn. Sailors and racehorses shouldn't try to mix." 'That's right, sir. I an' Tim's first duty is to the US Navy." "Yerse!"

"Glad you're going to get your money back Dunnevan." "I already . . . owww . . . I mean thanks, sir!" The same atmosphere of success, good feeling and confidence which followed Seaman Linn and Fireman Dunnevan back to their duty with the US Navy, surrounded Miss Elnora Templeton and her finance, Bert Sedgwick. Day after day, Miss Templeton assured herself that Bert was a changed man. He passed his physical examination for flying school. He began to brush up on textbooks. He joined the navy crowd which has its headquarters in Coronado. Horses raced every day at Del Mar, but Mr. Sedgwick's box was deserted. Picking up a paper one evening. Elnora read that The Shamrock had won another race and would be entered for the Handi-

"Bert?" "Yes, dear?"

"Tim and Benny won another "Who? Oh, yes-those sailors. What was that horse's name?"

"The Shamrock." "That's right. Odd how a fellow forgets!"

And Bert, now a flying cadet, went back to reading his air service Reg. Book.

"Oh, Bert, you are cured! I shall kiss your noble brow!" Bert accepted the accolade with smug nonchalance. All was merry as a marriage bell, and this gay deceiver nursed his secret vice without fear of a reckoning. It would not be long now. The Shamrock had run a mile against pretty classy opposition in 1.37. He was a cinch to win the Handicap, Silent Thomas had reported. "Show Money" Sedgwick - oh, yeah?
