Church Services in Salem

Rev. Rudisill To Address Lutherans. Rev. Earl S. Rudisill, who will appear at the American Lutheran church tonight at 8 o'clock, has contributed over 60 articles to psychological and religious journals. The psychologist has written the book "The Intimate Problems of Youth" and contributed to "Clinical Psychology" and "Our Day of Worship." He holds membership in the American psychological association, Phi Beta Kappa, American academy of political and social science, the national council of parent education, and adult education association of Pennsylvania. He organized the city-wide program of parent education in York, Pa., and the first institute of parenthood and home relations at Thiel college. He is chairman for character education of the Pennsylvania congress of parents and teachers. He will speak to religious education workers tonight as a representative of the parish and church school board of the United Lutheran church in America. Applegarth Adaptation Scheduled. Margaret Applegarth, well known writer of children's stories, has inspired the adaptation to be presented by the Presbyterian Sunday school, "God's Innkeepers," in observance of Children's day this Sunday morning at 9:45 o'clock. Rev. W. Irvin Williams will speak on "The Presbyterian Church Makes History," evaluating the two great reformers, John Calvin and Martin Luther, and relating the history of the church. At the night service, Mr. Williams will preach on the new decade relating to the home. His subject, the first in a series, is "The Ten Commandments for Wives." The service will depict the entire wedding service without reading of the vows. After the night service, the Westminister youth fellowship will meet in the club room from 8:30 until 9:30 p.m. with Jane Patton, student at the San Anselmo Theological seminary, leading the devotions and Mr. Williams speaking on the topic, "Being a Real Person."

Red Cross Official Lauds Blood Donors

Declaring that men out of uniform are fighting battles on the home front as an unofficial medical corps, Alvin J. Crose, representing the Marion county blood donor service, said that civilians are giving their blood to soldiers who are giving their life's blood in this war, in his address to the Friday luncheon meeting of the Salem Red Cross. Crose declared that men wounded on the fighting front have received blood transfusions within ten minutes after injury and that other men have received as many as 40 transfusions as part of the medical aid which saved their lives. Since Portland is one of the 31 blood donors' center, and the only one in the northwest, communities within 70 miles of this center are asked to donate part of the five million pints of blood needed by the American Red Cross. Communities must have blood into the Portland blood center within 24 hours after donation, to be valuable to the army. Salem people who wish to donate a pint of blood may register at the Presbyterian church and come a few days later between 10 a.m. and 10 p.m. to make the donation.

Woodburn Employment Office Set

A United States employment office will be opened at once in Woodburn in care for labor demands in that area for the balance of the summer. W. H. Baillie, manager of the Salem USES, announced Friday. The office will be an extended desk of the Salem branch of the service, and is being opened in cooperation with the Woodburn employment committee which has been active in watching labor developments in that area. The Woodburn committee has selected a building site which will be inspected Friday by Joseph Wilson of the Salem office. Director of the office has not yet been selected, but it will be someone sent from Salem. The Woodburn branch will supply principally cannery and agriculture labor and will cooperate with the county agent and agriculture labor sub-committee.

New Income's Effect on Benefits Eyed

George Aiken, state budget director, was assembling figures Friday to determine what effect referendum of the wine bill and the bill imposing a $50 annual tax on pinball machines and $10 tax on "juke" boxes would have on old age assistance payments in Oregon. Petitions for referendum of both these bills are now in circulation. The time for filing completed referendum petitions expires next Tuesday. The legislature estimated that the tax on pinball machines and "juke" boxes would raise in excess of $1,000,000 annually. The other bill provides that the sale of all so-called "fortified" wines shall be placed in state liquor stores. Receipts from pinball machine and "juke" box taxes would go largely for old age assistance under the legislative act. Wines are now sold in privately owned establishments. Liquor profits also go for old age assistance and other relief. The last legislature "earmarked" $12,000,000 of state liquor receipts for old age assistance, in addition to funds received from the counties and the federal government.

Evangelistic Tabernacle Sets School Campaign

The Salem Evangelistic tabernacle will launch a Victory Sunday school campaign, directed by the pastor and the Sunday school board, with the contest opening this Sunday. Miss Nadine Grice and Miss Myrtle Hansen of Oring, Wash., will spend the summer in Salem in charge of the Sunday school. The two will speak Sunday night at an old-fashioned revival meeting in the tabernacle.
