FR Urged to Appoint Civilian Food 'Czar' in New Scene to Rollback US Consumer Prices

WASHINGTON, June 14—(AP) Bi-partisan legislative leaders urged President Roosevelt Monday to appoint a food "czar" and reportedly received in return an executive proposal that congress provide from $1,500,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 to subsidize a rollback in prices to consumers.

Spurred by fears of a canned food shortage, Senator George (D-Ga.) said a group of five senators and four house members urged Mr. Roosevelt to centralize in one agency the final authority over production, distribution, preservation, rationing and prices of agricultural commodities.

There were suggestions that this power be invested either in Food Administrator Chester Davis or War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes. Senator Hill of Alabama, acting senate democratic leader, said Byrnes objected to any such course.

Byrnes, present at the White House conference, was represented as contending that creation of an over-riding authority would be likely to result in the puncturing of present food price ceilings to spur production and canning activities—an outcome George said appeared inevitable unless subsidies are applied.

In this connection, President Roosevelt was said to have urged

Recruiter Searching Here For New US Radar Officers

A search for officers to supervise operations of all radar equipment, the secret which has recently been explained to the people of the United States, brings Lt. (jg) Raymond Swartout to Salem today to interview and assist applicants presenting their records.

The search renewed by the office of naval officer procurement district, is for men who have had experience in radio or electrical engineering. Men who hold amateur radio licenses and have had good practical experience in the field of radio and electrical work may qualify, Swartout said Monday. Ages are 19 to 50 years. Roy W. Morris, Salem police radio operator who recently visited his family in Salem, is an enthusiastic navy radar man.

Lt. Swartout will make his headquarters today at the US navy recruiting substation in the postoffice, according to Chief Robert B. Fallon, in charge of the recruiting office here. Applicants may see Swartout there from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Graduates in the engineering fields of agriculture, ceramics, chemical, general, industrial, metallurgical, mining and petroleum studies are needed for radar training courses. Requirements for the training included a completed course in calculus and at least one year in physics, above average scholastic records and good physical conditions.

Morris has described to men working in police radio here now, using tentacles of light waves, the navy, and other armed forces of the US, use radar to reach out through fog, clouds, rain, snow and darkness to locate and follow every move the enemy makes.

The early development of radar has been outlined by war and navy departments in a joint announcement describing the operation and also the origin of the name for the radio-detecting-and-ranging equipment. Ultra high-frequency waves traveling with the speed of light are focused across, land, sky and sea, searching for planes, ships and other objects. Striking an enemy vessel, the waves bounce back. Time required for the signals to travel to the reflector, surface and return makes possible the determination of the distance of the target.
