

Girls Now In National Group

At a supper meeting at which the Junior Hostess league of Salem voted to become a member of the National Girls Service organization, hostess division of the USO, Lt. A. D. Fowler of the Salem air base gave an address on the duties of the enlisted men in the army air corps. The meeting was held at the Chemeketa-street USO on Wednesday night.

The army air corps is not a new organization, the lieutenant pointed out, but although it is old in theory and in practice there are some things new, especially the different professions which are now used in order to insure an efficient organization. For only three years has it been a separate branch of the armed service.

Eleven sections described by the speaker are 1. orderly room, where records of the men are kept; 2. supply, for material or equipment; 3. transportation, for ground use of the corps; 4. communications; 5. armament, for equipment on planes which throw bullets and ordnance, where ammunition, chemicals and gases are handled; 6. operations, for the keeping of all records pertinent to flight of planes, to be sent to Washington; 7. parachutes; 8. medical; 9. cooks and bakers; 10. engineering, with specialists in landing gear, radio, guns, sheet metal, painting and photography; 11. intelligence, including instructors on enemy information and the department of public relations.
