Scio Allows Contract Bills; Stayton Plans Festival

SCIO — Council of the city of Scio allowed contract bills totaling $182.64, and other bills aggregating $413.12 at the regular July meeting. The latter group included labor and materials for renovation of the city jail, payment for cement drainage tile to be used on Main street, and 24 tons of premium paving material for patching streets.

Council and budget committee approved the 1933 fiscal budget of $1404. Eight hundred dollars is listed for payment of principal and interest of bonded indebtedness, $420 for street lighting and $239 as general fund expense. Estimated fines and licenses total $55.

Retail and package beer licenses were granted to Mr. and Mrs. Carl W. Caswell for Max's lunch.

STAYTON — The city council at its monthly meeting Tuesday adopted the budget for the town of Stayton as published.

Permission was granted Elmer Phillips, stock buyer, to erect a scale and receiving pen upon lots south of the Gardner ditch facing west.

Permission was also granted the Santiam bean festival to close Ida street from the Richfield station eastward during the festival, July 27-31.

Scio Black Cap Yield Is Light

SCIO — Black raspberry picking is in progress in the Scio area, with good yields reported. Pickers are receiving four cents per pound. Strawberry harvest is virtually complete, with local yield being light because of unfavorable weather.

Hay is being cut and stored in barns in the Scio locality. Heavy yield is reported in most sections.

Shearing of breeding stock sheep still is incomplete in the Scio vicinity, the clip extending beyond the usual dates because of intermittent rains. Shearing of market lambs is expected to begin within a few weeks.

Carpenter Sees 40 Years' Changes in Railroading Serving as Engineer

DALLAS — "I can't remember a similar incident in railroading," Harvey Carpenter, 66, veteran locomotive engineer on the Southern Pacific's Oregonian, remarked upon retiring June 30 coincidentally with Engineer Jesse L. Woodson of Eugene. Woodson brought the Oregonian into Eugene to step off for the last time while Carpenter stepped on and ran her back to Portland before he, too, laid down his gloves to retire to his home at Dallas.

Carpenter was born at Hamilton, Nev., living there until he was 19 when he moved to California. Friends of the family induced him to go to Portland, which he did in 1898. There he secured his first job, that of fireman on the Southern Pacific working out of Portland. He was transferred that winter to Dunsmuir, Calif., on the Ashland division, firing between the two points until he was promoted to engineer in 1903. For the last 40 years he has run the Oregonian out of Portland and made his home, meanwhile, in Dallas.

When he started, all locomotives were equipped with wood burners, Carpenter recalled. In order to get the wood into the tenders, the fireman stood on a platform and threw wood upon the tank of the engine. This had to be done several times during the run. All the engines had to be heavily wooded just before reaching Portland in order to keep up enough steam to reach there and return to the wood pile.

Locomotives on the Dunsmuir and Ashland division had been converted to coal burners by the time Carpenter had been transferred there, he related. Later an engineer named Van Bolten was given the authority to convert all locomotives into oil burners. There was a gradual improvement over the years in little modern locomotive was perfected.

All box cars were of wood and few had air brakes, Lincoln pin coupling being used. The procedure, Carpenter explained, was for the engineer to signal the brakeman to begin winding up the brakes with a wooden handle in order to stop the engine.

Over the years, changes were made in the equipment which at the time were not so noticeable as now if a comparison is made.

Mr. Carpenter spent most of his leisure time working for a humane society, being an officer in the state organization. He plans to continue with this, now that he has retired.

M. L. Jennings, superintendent of the Southern Pacific at Portland, commended Carpenter in a letter mailed at the time of the last run, stating, "I congratulate you on the successful completion of so notable a career and extend to you and yours sincere and best wishes for many more years of good health and happiness in

Board Sets New Library Hours At Silverton

SILVERTON — Mrs. H. B. Latham, chairman of the Silverton library board, announced that the new library schedule recommended by the city council will come into effect next week.

The board made a survey of the town and decided that Wednesday night would be the most feasible as the additional night which the library will be open. Starting next week the library hours will be Mondays, 2 to 5; Wednesdays, 2 to 5 and 7 to 9; Saturdays, 2 to 5 o'clock and 7 until 9 o'clock.
