Oregon's Fire Departments Function Despite Handicaps

Despite serious handicaps of which the greatest is a manpower shortage, the fire departments of Oregon cities are functioning efficiently, for the most part, and making important contributions to the civilian defense program, speakers at the fire chiefs' annual state convention in Salem declared Monday.

The group elected Chief Edward Greenfield of Portland president, Chief Cecil Harrison of Sheridan first vice president, Ted Adamson of Prineville second vice president, Chief Ivan Pearson of McMinnville treasurer, former Chief Thomas Coates of Tillamook life honorary secretary, and Jack Hayes of Salem, of the state defense council, working secretary. Adamson is on leave, serving in the navy in foreign waters.

The 1944 convention also will be held in Salem, the date to be selected later.

Fire chiefs from all sections of the state, along with representatives of the state fire marshal's office and state civilian defense council officials attended the sessions. Jerrold Owen, state civilian defense coordinator, spoke on behalf of the state defense council.

The forenoon session was devoted largely to a discussion of manpower problems with Chief Cecil Harrison of Sheridan directing the panel. It was brought out in discussion that a large number of firemen have been called into military service while some others have resigned to accept employment in war industries.

Establishment of military establishments also has added to the burdens of the fire departments. Under the classification of war emergency fire service the convention discussed civilian defense, priorities, farm fire protection, home safety program, forestry service and facility security, including the army, navy and coast guard. This panel was under the direction of Jack Hayes.

The state law relating to the movement to municipally owned fire equipment in time of war emergency was explained by Seth Thompson, state fire marshal. Distribution of civilian defense fire fighting equipment and use of the equipment also were discussed.

A number of fire chiefs complained that they had been unable to obtain necessary equipment to cope with the increasing demands for fire protection.

Two Fire Peril Areas Closed By Governor

Proclamations closing to entry except by permit, the Valseca basin and Black Rock forest areas of Polk county, and parts of Coos county, were issued Monday by Gov. Earl Snell.

The territory affected by the closure in Coos county includes most of the area lying east of the Oregon coast highway.

The proclamations were issued at the request of State Forester Nels Rogers because of existing fire hazards. Rogers said forest fires this year had covered only 280 acres, the largest of which was in the Looe Lake district of Douglas county.

A number of proclamations covering other sections of the state were issued previously.

Gas Ration Application Deadline Near

Many motorists will find themselves unable to buy gasoline after July 31 unless they hurry up and send in their application forms for renewing their present basic "A" and "D" gasoline rations, the district OPA announced today, following reports from many ration boards that the applications are very slow in coming in.

He went in for four passes with the rest of the American planes and knocked off part of his wing. The destroyer later sank.

PROTECT THAT CROP FROM THE RAVAGES OF HOP RED SPIDER

A well planned dusting program is one of the hop grower's best forms of insurance. Proper dusting with D-8 protects the hop crop against the ravages of red spider. It guarantees a full productive harvest of all the crop which your soil, your labor and nature's sunshine have produced. D-8 Dust D-8 is an effective and economical dusting material. It has been developed as the result of several years of careful field testing in the principal hop growing areas of the northwest.

Numerous deciduous fruits and field crops, such as peaches, cherries and beans, can also be protected against Red Spider with D-8 Dust D-8. Write for our special literature.

Your New Gasoline Ration Book Says— CHANGE OIL JULY 21

Safest Oil Change Guide For Those Who Drive Less These Days is Fresh Golden Shell Motor Oil When "A" Coupon Numbers Change

YOU FOLKS who drive much less under wartime restrictions shouldn't use the speedometer for your oil change guide any more. The truth is, less driving means you should be even more careful, for oil is constantly exposed to dust and abrasives carried through the air—and to dilution by partially burned fuel particles. Too, in short-trip driving at slower speeds, the engine often doesn't get hot enough to vaporize water formed by combustion and condensation. When water accumulates in your crankcase, it further contaminates your oil. So your safe bet (regardless of how few coupons you've had to use) is to have your nearby Shellman or Shellady put in fresh Golden Shell motor oil every time you go to a new number in your "A" gasoline ration book (every two months). Chances are you won't have to add a drop between times.

FREE HOME CANNING FOLDER

Your nearest Shell Station has the new "How-To-Shell" folder for home canning and drying of foods, a step-by-step guide to successful preserving of fruits and vegetables. The methods and directions are approved by Home Demonstration Office of the Agricultural Extension Department, University of California. Get your copy before the supply is exhausted.
