Need 60 Donors—While newspapers this week carried the story of the San Francisco boy who was stabbed by the Japanese 11 times, and was given up for dead until he received blood plasma, the American Red Cross issued an appeal for more donors. The boy was given 16 pints of blood so the Salem chapter of the Red Cross has asked for 60 donors to sign up before Tuesday, to fill Marion county's share of keeping plasma on hand for another such emergency. Red Cross workers will make appointments for those who wish to contribute their blood Tuesday if they are telephoned, 9277, either today or Monday. Donors do not have to have their blood typed, they emphasized.

Completing Oiling—Marion county's summer road-oiling program, more than three times as pretentious as that of 1942, is due to close sometime next week after the crew has returned from Aumaville to the Salem area to complete tag-ends of jobs here, County Engineer N. C. Hubbs said Friday. Twenty-one cars of oil, some of them small, have been obtained, with only one minor delay, this summer for the repair of county thoroughfares. Last summer only five or six cars were used and those were available only at intervals.

Hearing Continued—The hearing before State Engineer Charles E. Stricklin, involving the question whether the act of one man's livestock drinking from a spring on another's property constitutes "appropriation," was continued Friday pending receipt of additional data bearing on the dispute. Yale Farr and E. D. Cochran, Marion county farmers, are the parties. Stricklin, who said this was the first case of the kind referred to his office, indicated the hearing would not be concluded before September.

Lads Punished—"Old fashioned" discipline was meted out Friday to three Salem boys, ages 10, 11 and 12 years, when their parents learned that they had been involved in what city police had termed a "burglary." City Juvenile Officer Frederick Beck reported, and that punishment was laid on by the parents, themselves. The youngsters readily admitted, Beck said, that they had walked into the Salem Nut Growers' unlocked building and taken some tools. They had never before been involved in any mischief coming to the attention of officers.

Inmates Escape—Two young women escaped Friday afternoon at approximately 5 p. m. from the Fairview home here, state police reported Friday night. Most easily identified, they believed, would be Grace DeCluff, 18, whose hair was described as "yellow and black." With her went Helen Knight, 25.

Loses Tots in Fire

Mrs. William Hardy left her three young children in the family trailer at Portland to go to a store. When she returned, all had been burned so badly that they died. Mrs. Hardy, who was expecting her fourth child, was near collapse (above) when she learned of the tragedy. Elveta, 4, a daughter, was dead when taken from the dwelling. Owen, 17 months, lived an hour or so, and William Joseph, 2 1/2, an hour longer. The father works in a nearby shipyard. (Associated Press photo.)

Good Conduct Medals Given At Camp Adair

CAMP ADAIR, Ore., July 23, 1943—Eight soldiers representing almost every rank in the army from private first class to second lieutenant marched front and center Thursday afternoon to be the first men to receive the good conduct medal at Camp Adair.

Following the retreat and preceding the review in which troops of the 614th QM battalion participated, two selected officers and six men from the ranks meant to be decorated with the good conduct medal stepped forward. The service ribbons were passed by Major Jesse Bell to Colonel Gordon H. McCoy, post commanding officer who pinned them on the men and shook in turn the hand of each in congratulation and individually expressed confidence in his deserving the reward.

Those soldiers awarded the good conduct medal for exemplary efficiency and fidelity and for the completion of Pearl Harbor of one year of continuous active federal military service were: Second Lieutenants William H. Lyon and Robert Newcomer, M/Sgt. Benjamin F. Hull, T/Sgt. James J. Frank, Sgt. Gerald P. Allen, Cpl. Charles Hoffman, T/5 Otto O. Burnett, and Pfc. Adrian Millard.

The good conduct medal is established as a reward for those enlisted men who have demonstrated faithful and efficient performance of duty, capacity to produce desired results and whose behavior has been such as to deserve emulation.

OPA Sleuths Will Check Gas Coupons

Beginning today and continuing for several days OPA investigators will be making spot checks at service stations in and beyond Portland metropolitan area in a drive to secure proper endorsement of license number and state of registration on mileage rationing coupons, the district OPA announced today.

Investigators will visit a number of stations and will issue citations to motorists who have not endorsed their gasoline coupons requiring the motorist to appear before his local war price and rationing board on or before July 27 "to show cause why penalty should not be imposed," it was explained.

Whether or not the violator gets off with a caution, warning notice or other action is left to the discretion of the individual board.

Salem Retail Credit Group Responds to Navy Guests, Pledges $400 for Shangri-La

Inspired by two visiting members of naval personnel, the 30 members and guests attending the Friday meeting of the Salem Retail Credit association purchased war savings stamps and pledged bonds amounting to $400 for Shangri-La.

L. J. McNamara, navy recruiting officer for the naval officer procurement, told those present that "there's no need to turn out Shangri-La unless we have men properly trained to command those ships. We are all stockholders in the affairs of our government," he continued.

McNamara revealed that all types of naval personnel are needed, in enlisted brackets as well as officers. While the need is great, nonetheless the requirements have not been liberalized but are more rigid now than they were 18 months ago, he continued. Only men properly trained and equipped are being sent out. "Do a little bit more to help us get the men and women we so sorely need," he appealed.

Yeoman Dorothy Duncan, Portland recruiter for Waves who is spending this week on duty in Salem, told a few inside details about life in the women's branch of the navy.

After four to six weeks' basic training at Hunter college, NY, WAVES are assigned to specialty schools, she said. Her own training center was Stillwater, Okla., where all WAVES were quartered in a dormitory nicknamed the USS Willard, and everything was run like a ship—stairs were ladders, floors were decks, the young women requested permission to go ashore when they wished leave or liberty, etc.

A typical day in the life of a WAVE starts at 6 a. m., according to Yeoman Duncan, when she is awakened; breakfast is 6:30, followed by cleaning up quarters; two hours of drilling and classes; luncheon lasts two hours with WAVES spending part of the time reading, writing letters or mending and washing clothes; classes take up again in the afternoon, followed by a free period usually devoted to sports; then comes dinner and dancing; 7 to 9:30 p. m. is devoted to study and lights go out at 10 p. m.

Christian Camp Opens Sunday
TURNER—The ninth annual Christian camp for boys 9 to 12 years old, sponsored by the state Ninety and Nine men's organization, will open Sunday, July 25, at the Turner tabernacle grounds and continue through August 1.

Evangelist W. W. White of Portland will be camp director, and deans will be Rev. Elmer Parrish and Vernon Kullowatz, both of Multnomah. The instructors include John Stotsenburg and Dick Humphreys of Eugene, Dallas Messer and Alger Fitch of Portland and Lloyd Newton of Baker.

Christian training classes, recreational periods and night bonfire services comprise the daily schedule. Closing on August 1, the older boys camp will convene that day to continue through August 8. The same camp personnel will be in charge.

Boys from 12 to 15 will be registered at the latter camp. Lloyd L. Arnett of Portland is committee chairman of both camps.
