Flier Owes Life to New Testament

AN ALLIED EVACUATION HOSPITAL, North Africa—(Delayed)—To a new testament and to the message which came with it from back home—"wear it always"—Paratrooper Wesley C. Hines of Belle Vernon, Pa., owed his life.

Sergeant Hines was sent to Sicily on the third night of the invasion. As the plane neared the landing point five miles inside the coastline, bursts of anti-aircraft machine gun fire came up and around it. First in line, Hines opened the plane door and stood poised, waiting for the green light to signal the paratroopers to jump.

Just as it flashed, a 30-calibre bullet struck him on the left side of his chest, knocking him backward into the plane. But, in the left breast pocket of his jumping suit, Hines was carrying the new testament with a metal heart shield sent to him a month ago by Miss Doris Jones of Labeled, Pa., with a request that he "wear it always."

The bullet hit the metal cover, just above the inscription "May the Lord be with you," glanced off, and inflicted a flesh wound instead of penetrating his chest.

Now hospitalized, Hines received the purple heart, which he promptly sent along with the extracted bullet to his mother, Mrs. Isabelle Schoenholz, of Belle Vernon. Meanwhile, he got his chaplain to write to his commanding officer, saying that the 15 men who jumped out of the plane without a second's delay after seeing him knocked back deserved a decoration, too.

Losses Force Nazi Strategy Plan Reversal

By THOMAS HAWKINS
BERN, Switzerland—(AP) Nazi dispatches reaching Switzerland assert that Germany is retreating from her long-touted theory of a "European fortress" to an idea of basic, final defense deep within the continent.

Increasingly since the allies cracked Sicily the Nazi press has been referring to the "reduit national" to be held to the last, with the current coastal fortifications considered only as outer bastions. (A reduit is a small inner fortification usually at the core of a larger fortress.)

The strategy, as discussed in the Nazi publications, takes into consideration the possible loss of Italy, southern Greece and France's Atlantic coastline, leaving Germany in a position to make a last stand not only within her own borders but in the industrially desirable parts of central Europe.

Allied military observers here warned against any optimistic deductions that the Nazis intend a quick, easily-forced withdrawal. They said the bitter fighting must be anticipated, expressing the conviction that the Nazis will let all Europe become a shambles before ending the battle.

"Discussing the 'reduit national' idea, the Swiss weekly publication Weltwoche wrote that "the bulk of the German troops, especially stationary weapons, is ready to take up an inner line." Nazi press dispatches indicate that the ultimate "reduit" would concern only Hungary, Rumania, Denmark and Germany, leaving the rest as a sort of no man's land.

Published allied reconnaissance reports corroborate that work on the Atlantic wall has been virtually discontinued. Sharply cut Nazi cement production figures are another indication of this.
