Sunday was the 25th anniversary of the wounding of Capt. Douglas McKay, above, in World War I, a reporter for the Camp Adair Sentry discovered last week. Capt. McKay, who between wars served Salem one term as mayor and Marion county three terms as state senator, is now director of a training branch at Adair. The Sentry interview with Capt. McKay relates that as a first lieutenant with the 361st Infantry of the 91st division, he went "over the top" September 26, 1918, in the Meuse-Argonne battle and remained in action until wounded October 3. He suffered six separate shrapnel wounds and was hospitalized for more than a year in France and in the United States.

War Writer's Biggest Thrill

By EDWARD KENNEDY AP Features

LONDON—My biggest thrill came the day I was convinced that Egypt and the middle east would never be lost to the axis. That was on my first trip to the western desert, in August, 1940. When I arrived in Cairo, Mussolini had 300,000 soldiers in Libya and 200,000 in Ethiopia, all set to put the squeeze on Egypt. France had collapsed and with it the Weygand army of the middle east.

To defend Egypt there were some 50,000 combat troops, many not fully trained and with poor equipment, seven operational squadrons of the RAF and a medium-sized fleet at Alexandria. I investigated to find if Egypt had even been taken before via the western desert and learned that while this country had been successfully invaded many times, the conquerors had never crossed the western desert.

Then I went into the desert. We visited a British armored regiment which was living in one of the worst parts of the desert, beset all day by flies, eating the worst rations I ever tasted.

Their equipment consisted of a museum collection of tanks, some so broken down they could be used only as pillboxes. Beside one of these tanks, I talked to a colonel of about fifty and a subaltern who looked twenty.

"Do you think you can hold Egypt?" I asked.

"Yes," replied the colonel.

I looked at the decrepit tank and said "How?"

"I don't know how, but I know we will hold Egypt," said the subaltern. There was something in the tone

Mexicans Shifting To Late Harvest Areas

PORTLAND, Oct. 4.—(AP)—Mexican farmhands from the Salem area are being shifted to late harvest regions in Oregon and Washington, the office of labor of the war food administration announced today.

Approximately 100 will leave for Vale, Ore., sugar beet fields next week, and another 100 for potato patches in the Redmond, Ore., area. Additional groups will be transferred to Hood River, Yakima, and Wenatchee for the apple harvest.

of his voice that convinced me that Juke would be held.

I think that was my greatest thrill. I decided that this was an army army I would like to stay with. I have never regretted my decision.

State Appeals Juke Box Tax

Appeals of the two cases involving constitutionality of the 1943 law imposing a tax of $10 a year on "juke boxes" and $50 a year on pinball machines were being prepared Monday for the state tax commission by members of the attorney general's staff.

The Multnomah county circuit court in recent decisions held the law unconstitutional and invalidated collection of both taxes. The law was introduced in the legislature by Rep. John Steelhammer of Marion county. While being advocated at the session, it was estimated that the taxes would produce $1,000,000 a year. The tax commission later estimated receipts much less. Revenue was to go for old age assistance.

State Trains War Workers

The state vocational education division reported Monday that it had trained 162,607 war workers in Oregon in the three years ended June 30.

Eighty per cent of the training is done in Portland, 9 per cent in Eugene and 11 per cent in other sections of the state.

Officials said the programs in the Portland area have increased particularly in the supplemental fields. Classes for the training of automotive repair men for the federal office of defense transportation have been established in Klamath Falls, Roseburg and Marshfield.

A course in truck and bus driving and roadside repair will be established in Medford soon.

Julia says—
Coffee can be entertaining

IT'S ONE THING to brew a pot of coffee and it's another to use coffee as the principal theme in feeding and entertaining a group of people. But with just the slightest amount of ingenuity you can do that very thing with brilliant success.

I'm thinking of such problems as: taking care of a group of Red Cross workers, or the war-working woman who wants to entertain some friends of a Sunday morning, or an informal mid-day meeting of P. T. A. members.

Recently I took another trip down into the heart of that hospitable state, Texas. And I had the warm pleasure of being a guest at just such a "morning coffee party" which started about eleven-thirty.

The whole affair was on the order of a "brunch," so that late workers could consider it a breakfast and early risers would make it a lunch.

When I investigated the details, later (my curiosity is never satisfied) I discovered that the whole thing had been contrived simply and in a short time. The menu was as follows:

Baked Chicken Hash with Ripe Olive Sauce
Broiled Tomato Halves
Hot Corn Muffins Currant Jelly
Old-Fashioned Gingerbread and Coffee

The gingerbread tasted so good with the coffee I asked my hostess for the recipe. Here it is:

OLD-FASHIONED GINGERBREAD

2 1/2 cups enriched flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. soda
1/2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. ginger
1 tsp. cinnamon

1/2 tsp. cloves
1/2 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 cup molasses
1 cup boiling water

Sift flour, measure; sift again with baking powder, soda, salt and spices. Cream shortening; gradually add sugar, creaming until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Alternately add molasses and flour mixture, beating until smooth. Add boiling water and stir until combined. Bake in well-greased drip pan (9 1/2 x 12 x 2) in moderate oven (350° F), 45 minutes or until done. Serve warm or cold, plain, with cheese topping, wedges of cheese or warm with a fruit sauce. Serves 12.

Of course there are "evening coffee affairs" when guests come after they have had their dinner—all but dessert—and you serve coffee and any dessert you want.
