

Joan Nye Is Bride of Sunday

Miss Joan Nye and Corporal Richard J. Grill exchanged their marriage vows Sunday afternoon at a lovely wedding at the home of Mrs. Blanche Jones on South Church street.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Edith B. Nye and her husband is the son of Mrs. Ella Grill of Joliet, Montana. Mrs. Ruth Smith played the wedding music.

The ceremony took place before a large window arranged with a semi-circle of palms and fern and candelabras holding white tapers. In the center was a large basket of peach and yellow gladioluses and yellow chrysanthemums.

For her wedding the bride wore an afternoon dress of navy blue silk crepe enhanced with a matching ruffle extending from the neckline and down the side of the dress to the hem. She wore a navy blue hat with veil and her accessories were gold and navy. She carried a cascade of pale yellow and white carnations, bouvardia and maiden hair fern.

Corporal and Miss Leo H. Brockway attended the couple. Mrs. Brockway wore a gold crepe dress with brown hat and accessories. Her flowers were yellow button chrysanthemums and roses.

Mrs. Nye, who gave her daughter in marriage, wore an aqua blue crepe gown and corsage of Talisman roses.

The newlyweds received their guests at an informal reception after the wedding. Mrs. Joseph Teel and Mrs. Blanche Jones presided at the bride's table.

Corporal and Mrs. Grill will reside at 06 South Church street while he is stationed at Camp Adair.

The bride is a graduate of Salem schools and her husband attended Eastern Montana State Normal school at Billings.

Eyerlys Hosts To Soldiers

Sixty-eight visitors were entertained at the Eyerly Flying E ranch Sunday afternoon. There were men in uniform from different military units in the vicinity of Salem, a few of their wives and representatives of the Chemeketa street USO, sponsors of the party. As on a similar occasion two weeks ago, Mr. and Mrs. Lee U. Eyerly told their guests to 'make themselves at home.'

Many eastern and southern states were represented in the group and many exclamations of appreciation of the beautiful Oregon surroundings were heard. A horse saddled with a silver-trimmed outfit was admired and riding him was an experience enjoyed by a number of the soldiers at the host's invitation. The Arabian horses, valuable saddles and gun collection proved of great interest to the guests.

Assisting Mrs. Eyerly in serving refreshments were Mrs. Rose Howland and her daughters, Phyllis and Opal, Mrs. Louis Johnston, Mrs. Victor Kelly and Miss Connie Newton. Representing the USO were Robert R. Boardman, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Anthony and Mrs. Herma Pfister.

Servicemen's wives in the party were Mrs. William Cohen, Mrs. Daniel Samet and Mrs. Mark Johnson, all of Brooklyn, N.Y., Mrs. William Davis, Buffalo, N.Y., and Mrs. John McAteer of Boston, Mass.

Vitamin Deficiencies

American Public Shouldn't Have 'em

By MAXINE BUREN

Perhaps it's only because of a desire to sell a product, but there's a great deal of misleading "information" being given on radio programs, regarding homemaking during the war. This morning I heard an announcer say that his product was trying to make up for the vitamin deficiencies "resulting from rationing."

Checking to find if there is any excuse for deficiencies, "caused by rationing" I somehow fail to find a reason why this should be, and rather think that any deficiencies in vitamins which the American people may be suffering from, are due to other reasons than a curtailment of good foods by the rationing program.

In the first place, two great vitamin warehouses, butter and meat are rationed. Butter is rich in vitamin A and D, but eggs and whole milk contain these vitamins and the B vitamin as well.

While meat is rationed, there is a sufficient amount allowed for each individual to give what vitamins are needed even without perfectly good substitutes. Fish is plentiful in this section of the country and no one should be vitamin-starved because of a regulated meat allowance, especially when it is as large as ours is. Thoughtful selection of the low-point meat cuts results in a step-up of allowance per individual, too, and from the number of householders rushing to the store to use up red stamps at the end of each period, many women find their allowance of meat and fats over-sufficient.

Many others of course, find difficulty in staying within the allotted amount of meat. Perhaps we are just plain lucky for living in a section of the United States where fresh vegetables are always abundantly available, but never are the grocers' shelves empty of greens. Leafy greens are generous in their provision of vitamins. Cabbage, which we find in the market all year, contains A, all the B vitamins, C and D in large amounts. Ditto kale, spinach, turnip and mustard greens. (And for the benefit of those who don't know, liver, is the only meat that contains all that impressive list of vitamins.)

As for the other dozens of vegetables and fruits available in our local markets through even the winter months, there are many just oozing with the mysterious vitamins so necessary to a completely healthy human.

Furthermore, education in the necessity of vitamins for health has resulted in most women striving to include more in the family diet. With the certain result that war, instead of cutting down the amount of vitamins taken in by the average family, has increased it. Surely with the result that any deficiencies are a thing of the past.

Not only does the housewife add vitamins to her family diet on purpose, but she also unknowingly has stepped up the family consumption. Only this week comes the news that starting the first of October, a 1 white bread and enriched flour bought at the corner grocery will have a stepped up amount of thiamine (B1), more niacin (another B vitamin), and more food iron and another vitamin not previously included in enriched white flour, riboflavin, or vitamin B2.

Because enriched breads cost no more, they have been taken in by the great American housewife as an accepted part of the family diet.

Now we have an addition of a greater amount of vitamin B1 or thiamine in the diet—that vitamin which "helps to maintain
