

Jean West Married Tuesday

A wedding of interest to Salem folk is that of Miss Jean West and Mr. Frank J. McHugh, Jr., of Seattle and San Francisco, which took place Tuesday afternoon at St. Thomas More chapel in Green Hills, Portland. The bride is the daughter of Ex-Governor and Mrs. Oswald West, who formerly made their home in Salem.

The ceremony took place at 5 o'clock in the afternoon and the altar was decorated with white gladioluses and chrysanthemums.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a princess style gown of white faille fashioned with sweetheart neck, long sleeves and a gathered skirt which ended in a train. Her train length tulle veil was enhanced with a panel of lace and caught in her hair were orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of tuber roses.

Mrs. Helen West Stone was her sister's honor attendant. She wore a mist blue frock with matching blue hat and carried an arm bouquet of red roses.

A reception was held at the home of Mrs. Stone on SW Talbot road after the ceremony. The newlyweds left for a wedding trip after which they will be at home in San Francisco.

Attending the wedding from Salem were Governor and Mrs. Earl Snell, Mr. and Mrs. George Flagg, Dr. and Mrs. William H. Lytle, Mrs. William Connell Dyer, Dr. W. B. Morse, Mrs. George Rodgers and Mrs. James Hutchinson.

What they can do
What they're doing about it

10:30 p. m. but no women may leave the base unaccompanied either day or night. Recreation rooms are available at the base; in fact the camp is a small city in itself. Women may not leave the post for weekends unless accompanied by their mothers or a chaperone.

Pauline now has a choice of taking special training in photography or continuing in cooking which will bring her a rating very soon. Meantime her mother visited her for a week at the base and found that the young women, while eager and enthusiastic about their jobs, still find time to become a little homesick.

Mrs. Decker was adopted as camp mother during her stay. She returned last weekend and will relate more of Pauline's experiences in the marine corps tonight when she joins the Marine Corps League auxiliary.

Proud and happy to be serving her country, there's one young woman from Salem who has joined the thousands of women in the marine corps and is finding it to be the kind of life she's dreamed about. She's Pvt. Pauline Decker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Decker, 507 North 19th street, who's determined not to let brother George in the navy at the Great Lakes naval training station and brother Elmo trying for the air corps outdo her.

Pauline joined rather suddenly last summer while employed as a photographic finisher at Bishop's studio. She had planned to attend art school in Los Angeles, then decided it would serve her purpose and her country if she entered the marines where she could get her training without expense and free a man to fight at the same time. There are plenty of chances for advancement and study, she believes.

Her parents were enthusiastic about the idea so Pauline joined and left for training at Camp LeJeune, NC, on July 24. Less than a month later, with boot training behind her, she crossed the United States again to take up her duties at Camp Elliott, San Diego.

When Pauline arrived at Camp LeJeune, it had just been opened, women marines formerly being trained with WAVES at Hunter's college, NY. Due to temporary lack of organization, none of the girls received mail for the first week or so, but when it was distributed finally, she received a pack of 50 letters. Because she was among the second group to arrive there, she was rushed through boot training in 20 days and took a streamlined course in quantity cooking before being assigned to duty, making way for the next batch of recruits.

Awaiting orders and knowing they soon must leave, all the women rushed to wash and iron clothing before leaving but had just gotten them on the line when orders came through. Wet wash decorated the troop transport across most of the southern states, Pauline reveals. The women were traveling under secret orders on a train which pulled onto sidings to allow other engines to pass but which followed its own schedule. First big thrill came when they stopped in Alabama for breakfast as there was no diner on their train. The 100 girls, decked out in full uniform, formed in platoons and marched up the street to a tea room where women of the town had prepared an old-fashioned repast of scrambled eggs, hominy grits, hot biscuits, marmalade and coffee. During stops, Pauline was assigned to guard duty at the rear of the train. No one was allowed to disembark or to board the train except employees.

Amusing to the women marines were the civilians' expressions when the troop transport passed, the sea of faces topping uniforms turning out to be feminine rather than masculine. When they passed troops headed in the opposite direction, the boys cheered, while the girls enjoyed leaning from the car windows whistling at young men as they passed by. The long hours aboard train went swiftly as they made up parodies of songs sung by men in the service.

Arriving at Camp Elliott, Pauline found her training in cooking to be of value. She was assigned to help in the kitchens, cooking for the women who have taken over clerical and other jobs at the marine base.

Women are through work by 6:30 p. m. and may go out until
