Floating Super Market Serves British Fleet
 LONDON—The royal fleet auxiliary Reliant is a sort of floating super-market for the British Mediterranean fleet.

In her hold are some 15,000 items of naval stores ranging from pins to anchors, and she is at once grocer, butcher, haberdasher, stationer, plumber, electrician and hardware shop.

There is enough meat in the Reliant's refrigerators to feed 25,000 men for a month. Her distilling plant can turn out 150 tons of drinking water daily.

Serving under Capt. C. H. Noel are Britons, Lascars, Ceylonese, Swahilis, Maltese, Goanese and Palestinians.

The super-market has done all right so far in this war. It has yet to suffer bomb, mine or torpedo damage.
