Farmers Urged Cut Pulpwood, Avoid Shortage

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13 -(AP Reports of increasing gravity of the pulpwood and paper shortage were coupled today with an appeal by the war manpower commission for farmers to turn to pulpwood cutting and lumbering during the agricultural off-season. Enforced reduction of at least 18 per cent of all paper products available for use in the first three months of 1944 was indicated by the war production board.

The WPB's forest products bureau reported that pulpwood production decreased 18 per cent in the first nine months of this year as compared with a similar period in 1942. With a time lag between the cutting of wood and production of paper, the bureau said, first effects of the decrease probably will be felt in January.

An appeal for greater efforts in the nation wide salvage of F. Byrnes, director of the office of war mobilization, who declared that munitions plants already have had to close down for lack of paper containers to ship their munitions output.

Byrnes said that about 6,000,000 tons of paper a year are being salvaged currently while minimum requirements are 7,500,000 tons.

To encourage more labor for pulpwood cutting and other occupations useful to the war effort, Manpower Chairman Paul V. Mc-Nutt ruled that farm workers may transfer to such employment without obtaining a certificate of evailability. If a farm worker resix weeks his employer should make a request for his services for the additional period to the United States employment ser-

Capitol guides, reduced in numbers from the 1940 peak of 24 to 10 now, think they detect an increased interest on the tourists' faces. Most visitors wind up in one of the 20 or 30 organized trips through the historic halls tack of apoplexy.

This is a much greater percentage than in peacetime, said one boss guide who declined with dignity to permit use of his name. The fact that the dome, towering above the eerily-lighted rotunda, has been closed since Hitler marched into Poland in 1939, is no nified at that particular point.

The climb to the dome used to be sport for high school students and the elderly guides didn't accompany them. But the hordes of graduating classes which descended on the capital before the war no longer appear each spring. The office of defense transportation sees to

Toward Rome

The struggle during the past week has demonstrated conclusively that the Germans still cherish the hope of staving off a real attack on Rome for months, thereby nullifying any prospects the allies have of using Italy as a jumping off point for further assaults against axis-held Europe in the spring.

The terrain and the weather as well as reinforcements of several divisions which the nazi command moved into the line during the past week combined to give Generals Clark and Montgomery one of the toughest assignments any allied commanders have yet faced.

The Germans have 11 divisions (perhaps 165,000 men) on the line now, and the Americans, slugging it out with tough enemy veterans from the Russian front, found that the mountain strongholds around Mignano had been prepared with meticulous care.

Machinegun, mortar and ever rtillery positions have been blasted out of solid rock ledges with Hold on Leros mines of every type planted along every avenue of approach.

"We don't want to return to the feudal ages any more than we want to adopt the policy of communism, state socialism or fascism. I see little choice between living under an economic dictatorship or under a political dictatorship, except that theoretically we can always control an economic monopoly.'

Aiken gave this further warning: "There are those in America who would repeal many of the rightful advantages which agriculture has achieved during the past generation. There are those who would do away with farm cooperatives. There are those who would repeal the laws providing for farm credit at reasonable rates. There are those who would gladly turn the rural electric lines over to corporate interests. There are those who would sell out American agriculture for the benefit of certain industries. There are those who believe that every man who is poor is responsible for his own misfortune."

Aiken made a plea for greater unity among labor, agriculture and industry.

"If we divide among ourselves; if we permit agriculture to hate labor and labor to hate industry; if we indulge in race rioting or food rioting or any other preliminary to revolution to a great enough extent, we have a right to fear that, some day, a military dictatorship will take charge of us."

The course America takes next year, Aiken said, will spell not only our future but that of the world as well.

"Whether we want it or not, most of the nations of the earth look to America for leadership today. We will accept that leadership and pray that we may use it wisely. It must not carry with it, however, any pledge to support the rest of the world. We should not promise that which we cannot do. We can only help the other people to help themselves. We will not do this by scattering American resources in careless abandonment. Above all, let us promise ourselves that while we will assume leadership, it will be leadership and not domination."
