German Strength

No American should know better the strength of the enemy than the acting chief of our military intelligence section, but the assertion of Maj. Gen. Strong that Germany is stronger than in 1939 hardly seems possible. Surely the events on the battlefields do not attest it. In no important quarter is Germany attaining victories; in every theatre of action Germany is on the defensive and retreating.

Weakness, not strength, is the cause of the defeats. The losses are heaviest in German soldiers. The fighting, especially in Russia and in North Africa, has taken a terrific toll of Germany's best soldiers. The annual crop of youngsters is not sufficient to fill the gaps caused by death, sickness or capture. The number of divisions may remain constant, but the quality has deteriorated.

While it is true that Germany has more workers in war industry through its enslavement of the conquered, that industry is not sustaining its production. The supply of planes has diminished. The much-touted new secret weapons are not winning victories. The allied air assaults are steadily blasting away Germany's industrial strength.

The more Germany is conquered, the more it may fight like a cornered beast. Hitler is undoubtedly holding reserves of men and of equipment for the allied invasion. We doubt their adequacy to the task. Hitler's plan of war was that of the "blitz", the lightning stroke. He did not expect prolonged war; and cannot conduct it successfully in the face of the overwhelming resources of the United Nations.

Prime Minister Churchill was correct in warning the people in his recent speech that the bloodiest fighting lies ahead, barring a German collapse which we dare not count on. But to portray Germany as a more powerful foe than in 1939 hardly seems wise because it does not appear possible. If morale is a measure of strength then out of the mouths of German leaders themselves have come admissions of decaying morale within Germany and its satellite countries. The Germans should know their own strength better even than Gen. Strong, and not even Hitler is talking about victory now.

Road to China

Lord Mountbatten has perhaps the toughest job of all field commanders at the moment, the assault on the continental holdings of Japan. His base is the none-too-secure country of India. Presumably his immediate task is to open a supply line to China. But Burma lies athwart his path, and Burma is one of the most rugged countries in the world. The flanks of the Himalaya mountains are cut into ribs by rivers flowing at the buttom of deep gorges. The overland crossing is almost impossible, the amphibious attack on Rangoon must go hundreds of miles across the Bay of Bengal to reach the vulnerable spot at Rangoon, which with Japanese presence in strength will not be very vulnerable.

A study of the map shows that Lord Mountbatten may choose the longer way around rather than the short way overland to China. He may seize the Adaman islands rimming the Bay of Bengal on the east, then strike at the waist of the Malay peninsula. If positions there could be secured, a short advance across Thailand would put him on the Gulf of Siam. Then the allies would be in position to cut the enemy's supply lines to Singapore and the Dutch East Indies, and to move north along the coast to China itself.

This would be a most difficult operation because of the proximity of Japanese sea, air and land power. It can be accomplished only with superior force brilliantly directed and abundantly supplied. Its success would be made much easier if the attack could be synchronized with attacks on other fronts: from the southeast along the island chain; from the mid-Pacific by way of Wake and Guam islands. Preliminary to these moves the reduction of the Jap base at Truk probably would be required, and Rabaul is the big stepping-stone to Truk.

The allies have only hinted the broad lines of their strategy in the Pacific. The world waits anxiously and somewhat impatiently on the full revelation of that strategy through action. Without doubt the allies are amassing at selected bases the power that will be needed to crack the perimeter of Japanese conquest and then crumple Japanese power at its hub.

It may be well for stay-at-homes to start studying the map of the Pacific and of eastern Asia. It doesn't snow at Singapore.

French Have Trouble

Syria doesn't offer a very pretty picture for the Fighting French. This was the first action where the DeGaullists attained power; and the way the French have handled the trouble in Lebanon doesn't commend their administration. Even the British are concerned, because they want no Moslem flare-up in the near east.

The French arrested the president of the Lebanon republic, the premier and some cabinet members. French light tanks were used to overcome local resistance. Now Gen. De-Gaulle has sent Gen. Georges Catroux to Beirut to settle the trouble. He had better move fast, because of world reaction.

Syria is nominally independent, but the French have a mandate from the league of nations and have exercised general authority there, which was augmented after the beginning of the war. Just what has occasioned the outbreak in Lebanon is not clear-the Syrian political situation rarely is. But what has happened does the Fighting French no good and disturbs the political situation of the near east.

A headline says "Cossacks are mopping up the steppes." Sounds just like men doing women's work. The housewife mops down the

Reynolds for President

One can only express the hope that Gerald L. K. Smith, self-advertised "rabble-rouser of the right" launches his third party with Sen. Robert Reynolds of North Carolina as its candidate for president. There is only one other man who would in the opinion of Gerald L. K. Smith be better and that is Gerald L. K. Smith. Smith's affections are somewhat vagrant because not many days ago Smith was over in Minnesota and proposed Charles A. Lindbergh as a presidential candidate.

Reynolds has just announced he will not run for president, chiefly because he knows the political fate that would await him if he ran. He is one of a group of American senators whose "America for Americans" came perilously close to opening the gate for Hitler in this country as it did open the gate for hate and for Hitlerism. Here is what he inserted in the Congressional record on his return from a visit

"The dictators are doing what is best for their people. I say it is high time we found out how they are doing it, and why they are progressing so rapidly. . . Hitler has solved the unemployment problem. There is no unemployment in Italy. . . Hitler and Mussolini have a date with destiny. It's foolish to oppose them, so why not play ball with them."

As far as The Statesman is concerned it is quite agreeable to having Sen. Reynolds keep tryst with Hitler and Mussolini at their date with "Destiny."

Debate on' the new revenue bill begins in the house next week. Since the taxes imposed are only a fifth as heavy as requested by the treasury, the debate should be only a fifth as long. The house should be able to send the attenuated bill to the senate just in time for Thanksgiving.

There may be a war on, but people have at least one thing to be thankful for: Thanksgiving day comes when it belongs once more.

News Behind The News

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, November 14-General impression is that this nation now has abandoned isolationism through the 85 to 5 senate ratification of Mr. Hull's Moscow agreements. Neither the senate new deal leaders nor the exisolationists think so. Certain strong new deal senators are suspicious even of the size of the vote. They think (and say privately) that popular American earnestness and unanimity in demand for any reasonable action to make world peace a likely prospect hereafter, drew nearly all elements into support of the generalities of the Moscow agreements.

When the time comes for definite action under those agreements and when the boys come home, however, they fear the possibility of another quick Paul Mallon turnover of public opinion, or, at least of isolationist viewpoint. Say, for instance, the Russians take Poland, for whose protection technically, the British declared war on Germany-what will be the popular postwar opinion of this country? The administration already is moving to ward off this prospect of any popular turnover such as followed the last war by doing everything it can to publicize Mr. Hull's success in Moscow and promote immediate American sympathies toward Rus-

But why did confirmed isolationists like Senators Nye, et al, support a resolution calling for "an international organization?" Their speeches gave no indication of abandonment of principle.

Apparently, the promise of Senators Connally, McKellar, Vandenberg, etc., that each senator could vote his conscience when the treaty is brought back, enabled them to express hope without danger of commitment. They have an endless row of outs, in the phraseology of the resolution which promised "a just and honorable peace."

Certain republicans also were glad to take this free popular ride also for one special reason in addition to any that may have been mentioned. They think it will take the wind out of Willkie's campaigning sails for the present.

So the situation is this: The administration is now campaigning to popularize Russia as a seal on the tentative, uncertain, seeming senate isalotionism.

.The isolationists era willing to wait until they see what actually is done, what the postwar temperature of the country will be concerning what is done, and particularly what the boys say when they get back. The official argument therefore is over for the duration-but not ended.

The British are chiming in here and there with the prevailing domestic effort to lean more Russia's way. The British commander in chief in the near east (Sir Henry Maitland) sent a littlenoticed message to General Mihailovitch in Yugoslavia a few days back.

It did not question his heroic anti-nazi efforts, but suggested some sources close to him were more interested in fighting Tito's partisans (not all of whom are communists) than in fighting Germans. This can be described definitely as a result of the Moscow conference

The current deteriorated condition inside the European fortress was never better described than in a broadcast from Hungary, picked up by an official listening post here. For those who have an ear for subtleties, it told the story completely. The broadcast started off by saying a certain editorial had appeared recently in a Turkish newspaper. This editorial said Hungary had never wanted to get into the war, that her people had never done much for the axis anyway. They would be only too glad to get out of it and make peace. The Hungarians saw, however, what the Gersimilar idea. In conclusion, the Hungarian broadcaster added: "We have nothing to add and nothing to subtract from the Turkish editorial."

rather a within-doors sketch of the Doney family. The president of the university may have been an awesome individual to college freshmen, though Carl Doney was not one to stand on dignity; but this book gives an intimate picture of a family, with strong affections, identity of interests, and a family relationship which continued when from the one home two more homes sprang. The circle is broken by death, but ties of precious memory close the gap.

After a man dies and is buried, his relatives must go through his effects. His estate must be probated. His debts must be listed, his assets appraised. What did he leave in real estate, in merchandise, in stocks and bonds, in life insurance? Dr. Carl G. Doney's "probate" of his son's estate is of different character. He lists no material assets, though there were a home, a car, and books and books. What he does report are hundreds of letters of sympathy, Paul's diary, his lecture notes, his personal letters, his friendships, his garden, his dog, his recreation. These, rather than worldly goods are what a teacher leaves, and they were Paul Doney's legacy. And who, knowing the outreach of a college teacher's influence. may say that "he left no estate?"__

Just to share Dr. Doney's refreshing literary style I quote a few bits from the book:

"I am walking alone in his garden, looking into the shining pool of memory. The sun is setting, its dying light reflected from the grey-green leaves of the weeping willow and the glossy pods of the black locust. A faint wind whispers through the luminous gloom, birds fly in swift silence, a star comes faintly over the horizon. I see so much that gave its treasure to him; inner peace and beauty great hope and faith, work to be done, friends to be enjoyed. movements like deep tides that push upon the sea.' "No, the days are not alike though each one has hours and each one sees the sun come up and set. There are great days and small days, red-letter days and common-letter days."

"Day is for action: night bids man collect himself and test his many impulses. Night dissolves hates and opens tight hands; it welcomes uncreated love, the love that simply is. The day makes conquests, night heals the wounds and offers birth to things imperial. Best in the dark when winds are whispering can man know how powerfully he is inhabited; he then does not reason as a philosopher, he reaches truth directly.'

There are thousands of "broken circles" now where segments of youth have been sacrificed to the god of war.

"The bloom, whose petals nipt before they blew, Died on the promise of the fruit, is waste:

The broken lily lies-the storm is overpast." This paragraph from Dr. Doney's book may give comfort to those who mourn for young men lost in battle: "One can see that love is the foundation and the capstone of a human life. Love is strength, truth, beauty, justice, duty. We cannot believe that this whose cords are stronger than our strength, binding men to men, is broken by the body's death. That would be possible only in an irrational universe; it would be the destruction of the highest attainment of a purposing crea-In closing, I quote Browning's

New and mighty allied smashes against shaky nazi and Nipponese foes apparently are forthcoming soon to cap a full year of unbroken axis defeats and retreats.

Russian expectation of sweeping nazi invaders off Russian soil completely by the year end clearly is indicated-and within sight of accomplishment.

In Italy, another German holding front south of Rome is as certainly cracking in the center under Anglo-American attack.

From British and Italian bases allied air power already roaring into redoubled action to pave the way for cross-channe invasion of the continent by pulverizing smashes at German war industry and public morale. Half way around the globe.

panded and powerful American

7 at Pearl Harbor, the nation has yearned for word from the central Pacific that the march on Tokyo is on in earnest to avenge Pearl Harbor and Wake,

Bataan and Corregidor. Reduction by combined sea, air and land action of the insular defense in depth of Japan itself and the approaches to the China sea from the Pacific seems about to start.

No other construction can be placed on the Nimitz Armistice day broadcast from Honolulu or on the events in the Pacific from the Aleutians to the Solomo and New Guinea.

Piecing together recent events in the final phases of the campaign to clear the Solomons of the foe and take or utterly newtralize the enemy base at Rabaul, it becomes clear that Japanese leadership is beginning to show signs of panic:

The attempt to reinforce pr relieve garrisons trapped on Bougainville by the American forward leap to seize the Empress Augusta bay bridgehead and tighten the pincers on Rabaul falls into that category. It was a Japanese example of too little and too late like the defense of Attu and the retreat from Kiska far in the north.

Fire Destroys J. P. Eggler Home

SWEGLE - The J. P. Eggler home in the Swegle district, was destroyed by fire Saturday morning. Mrs. Eggler had been away from the house for a short time and when she returned the flames burst out as she opened the door. Nothing was saved except the clothing which Mr. and Mrs. Eggler were wearing at the time. The house belonged to a Mrs. Sherman.

Club Meeting Planned
HAZEL GREEN - The Sunshine Sewing club will hold its first winter meeting November 17. at the home of Mrs. L. McDonald. the new president.

A One-Minute Letter

TO ALL MOTHERS AND FATHERS:

The most precious possession in your home is the children Your desire that they should have sound spiritual instruction is a natural one, I am happy to announce that this service is now available at F. P. C. The lesson material in each department is carefully graded to meet your child's needs. This work is under the supervision of Miss F. Alta Davis, who has fifteen years of successful ex-perience in this highly special-ized field, in addition to her master's degree in Religious Education from the University of Pittsburgh.

The most practicable and sincere way to secure this op-portunity for your child is to bring him to the church school and you also attend. There are four classes for adults. You take your choice. There is a woman's discussion group, another for men, and yet another for young married folk. These are kept small to allow everyare kept small to allow everyone an epportunity of self-expression. We also have the large Bible class of men and women of all ages, under the leadership of Mr. Joseph Benner, a teacher excellently versed in the Word of God, Why not visit these classes and select the one that proves most helpful to you? pful to you?
