Scoutmasters Evolve, Launch Plan for Recruiting Boys

A recruiting plan was launched at the regular monthly scoutmaster round-table dinner meeting at Schneider's coffee shop Friday. The program was under the direction of Carl Aschenbrenner.

According to the plan the council headquarters will maintain a complete file of all Salem boys who will reach the age of 12 years within the next 12 months thus becoming eligible for the scouting program. Each boy will receive a birthday card on his 12th birthday inviting him to become a member of the troop in his church or a troop near his home. The scoutmaster of the troop most convenient for the boy will be notified about the boy's birthday and will get in touch with him. A member of the troop committee also will visit the boy's parents. The program is planned to insure the boy's entrance in scouting at the time of his greatest interest in that type of activity. The procedure which will be maintained from year to year is designed to insure orderly and systematic entrance of boys into scouting.

William Hamilton, a member of the executive board, expressed the appreciation of the community and businessmen for the conscientious week-by-week service job that the 25 Salem scoutmasters are performing.

The instruction period of the round-table program was devoted to the demonstration of the use of games and contests in the operations of the troop.

The next Cherry City district court of honor is scheduled for December 15 according to the announcement made at the meeting.

The Southeast Salem scout troop No. 17 accepted the assignment to distribute posters for the office of war information for the month of December. Troop 9, sponsored by the American Legion, accepted the same assignment for the month of January. Troop No. 13, sponsored by the Methodist church, accepted the assignment to distribute the tuberculosis Christmas seal posters Saturday.
