

New Location For Business School Leased

According to an announcement made Wednesday by Mrs. Ora F. McIntyre, manager, the Capital Business college has leased the second floor of the Court street building owned by Mrs. Henry Meyers in which the Salem Credit bureau is now located. Following some necessary remodeling, the college will move into the new location over the Court Street Dairy lunch and Stevens Jewelers, about December 18.

The Credit Bureaus have, in turn, leased the Nelson building and will move sometime later in the month.

The Business college, which was established 54 years ago, has been at its present location for the last five years, according to Mrs. McIntyre.

Called home from an extended vacation in California, Mrs. McIntyre will supervise the remodeling of the new location, and assist with moving, and then will return to complete her stay in California, she said.

Nesbitt has been in the south Pacific area.

T/3 Arthur G. Upston arrived in Salem by plane Wednesday morning from Camp Haan, California, where he is with the anti-aircraft artillery. He is spending his 15-day furlough with his mother, Mrs. A. G. Upston.

Sgt. Charles Olson writes to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar M. C. Olson from England, where he has been since sometime in October. He lauds the activities of the Red Cross saying, in one of the letters, "We sure see results of the Red Cross activities here, if you don't at home, and you should never hesitate to donate to it." He spoke of going to the Red Cross canteen near his base.

Telling of his impressions of England, Olson said that the houses are neat, mostly made of stone and bricks, because lumber is scarce, and that the sidewalks into the houses are worn down with years of wear. Streets are narrow and roads even narrower—not as wide as our alleys in some cases, he said. Travel is difficult, especially on Sundays.

He mentioned seeing the waterfront at Liverpool and of going through Mersey tunnel. The shops in Liverpool are quaint, he stated, but there are modern department stores and Woolworth stores.

The English people are friendly, "but were hard to understand at first," he said. Olson enlisted about a year ago in the army, his parents stated.

James Leonard Noyes, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Noyes, 1070 Broadway, enlisted in the marine corps at Portland Monday according to Sgt. Herman Doney of the local recruiting office. He is now a senior in high school and will remain on an inactive status until a later date. His father was wounded in action during World War I while a marine and is a past commandant of the Salem Marine Corps league detachment.

Morris L. Hunt, seaman second class, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Hunt of Sublimity, is visiting his parents while on a short leave. He has just completed boot training at Farragut, Idaho.

James F. Rowland, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Rowland of 236 South 18th street, left Tuesday for the marine corps base at San Diego, Calif. He had formerly been with the merchant marine and stationed at Dutch Harbor.

Layton Files Formal Appeal

Formal appeal of the case of Richard Harry Layton, Polk county, under death sentence for the slaying of Ruth Hildebrand, 17, whose body was found floating in the Willamette river a few miles south of Independence, was filed in state supreme court here Wednesday. The slaying occurred on June 7, this year.

Layton, formerly a police officer at Independence, was convicted of first degree murder in the Polk county circuit court with Judge Arlie Walker presiding at the trial.

The appeal was filed by Attorney Roy Hewitt of Salem, who stressed the refusal of Judge Walker to grant application for a change of venue and certain newspaper stories which he said were prejudicial against his client.

Layton is now in the state penitentiary here.

Fencing Larkspur Would Save Cattle

Fencing larkspur areas on cattle range in Malheur, Harney and Lake counties was proposed to the state post-war readjustment and development commission Wednesday by Kenneth C. Ikeler of the grazing service as a project which would save cattlemen at least $500,000 a year.

Ikeler said there is an annual loss of cattle from eating larkspur on the range estimated at 5000 head each spring while some cattlemen contend that the loss from larkspur equals the winter losses.

The proposal calls for enclosing the larkspur regions until July 1, by which time the larkspur does not interest cattle and the range is dry.

Sheep are not interested in this poisonous weed, Ikeler said.

Old Clothing Response Short of Expectations

Response to the appeal for old clothing and rags in a campaign sponsored in Salem by the churches, has been somewhat short of expectations to date, it was reported Wednesday. Originally scheduled to close this week, the campaign will continue through Wednesday of next week.

Bundles may be left at any of the churches or at the downtown depot at 174 North Commercial street. This depot will be open from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. A sign identifying the salvage depot will be in place today. No one will be on duty but the police department will have oversight, it was explained.
