Phil Steinbock Waits Again In Fence Deal

Philip Steinbock, who waited for more than two months to get council authority to build a fence around his metal scrap yard on the Salem waterfront and only two weeks for withdrawal of the permit eventually granted to him, faces another wait today.

The case of the city building inspector against Steinbock, who refused to remove the fence when the council decided the permit had been issued in violation of the city building code, failed to come to trial Friday because jurors could not be served.

"We'll start drawing again Tuesday and the case will be heard next Friday," Municipal Judge Alfred Mundt declared yesterday. Of the first list drawn this week one was an attorney and automatically excused, one had moved out of the city and one was ill in bed; one alternate was out of the city and the other could not be located.

A physician headed the second list drawn, and he was automatically excused; one worked out of the city; one had removed from Salem and one was not at home to be served when sought.

Diploma Fee Cancelled — No diploma fee will be charged graduating Willamette seniors this year, according to Walter E. Erickson, registrar. Seniors expecting to graduate either at the end of the semester or in June must fill in petition blanks by December 15. ### WU Alumnus Due Off Press

The third quarterly issue of the Willamette Alumnus will be in the mail Monday, according to Murco Ringalda, editor. Sponsored by Willamette university to keep alumni in closer touch with events on the campus, the new edition deals with the navy program.

Sharing the news with the naval unit is the Institute of American History and Civilization held on the campus this summer. The institute had as speakers Dr. William Warren Sweet of Chicago, Governor Earl Snell, and Ernest Haycox, author of "Stagecoach."

Personal news of alumni is being stressed this issue, according to Ringalda. Mrs. Helen Murdoch, alumni secretary, has gathered information from newspaper clippings and letters telling of activities of the graduates.

The third edition is somewhat late because of the change in semesters and will be the last one for the year. Publication date for the fourth issue will be in January.

Owens Warns Of Letdown In Defense

Suspension of some defense restrictions on the Pacific coast does not warrant the assumption, apparently held by many persons, that a letdown in civilian defense precautions is justified, Jerrold Owens, state civilian defense coordinator, said Friday.

Prominent personalities quoted by Owens as sharing the opinion that civilian defense activities should be continued include Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, chief of protection division, national office of civilian defense; Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada, Lt. Col. Thomas G. Thompson, former director of the war department civilian protection school at Seattle, and Lt. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, commanding Western defense command.

"The probability of an invasion in force on this coast is now much smaller than it was a year and a half ago," Lt. Gen. Emmons said. "There still exists, however, the danger of sabotage, raids by small landing parties, air attacks from carrier-borne airplanes and submarine bombardment. Though the enemy forces involved may be small and though they may act of desperation, these forms of attack can do substantial damage unless essential steps are taken to prevent or limit the damage."

Canby Farm Home Burned Monday

WOODBURN — Miss Marjorie Church, girls' physical education instructor at Woodburn high school, has been absent from her classes this week. The farm home of her parents, near Canby, caught fire during the high wind of Monday night and was burned to the ground. All household effects were lost.

Five power poles in the McKee district east of Woodburn were blown down in the Monday night gale, and a barb was flattened in the Hall addition to the west. Trees throughout the region were stripped of their leaves. Torrential rains followed the wind and have continued intermittently since.

Interstate Greet's New Friends in the Salem Territory!

Our good friends, Warren Pohle and Bert Staver, want to retire and we've purchased the business and will continue to give the finest possible service to the farmers in the Salem territory. We are adding men to our service department, and Al Vice, who will be manager of our parts department, will do everything in his power to keep you supplied with necessary repairs for your John Deere and "Caterpillar" equipment. We expect to receive more new machinery for this territory than was allotted in '43.

Don Hammack will keep in touch with you on John Deere and "Caterpillar" tractors and John Deere machinery. Fred Stettler will serve you on water and irrigation pumps and systems.

Warren Pohle and Bert Staver will stay a while to help us get acquainted with every farmer in our district. Come in and see us; tell us your problems; let us help you with friendly service.

Cordially yours,
