Creating a Jap Problem

Between the soft-headedness of the war relocation authority and the bullheadedness of the white citizen purists the Japanese problem has been wretchedly handled. The WRA let the internees at the centers they administered get out of hand, while the extreme Jap-haters contributed a great deal toward creating a false situation which will yield harvests of trouble in the future.

The original move of the western defense command was dictated by defense of the coast, so all Japanese were moved back from coastal regions. Loyal Japanese-Americans have been permitted to locate in other parts of the country. The disloyal are still interned and will be kept interned for the duration, unless shipped back to Japan under exchange agreement.

However the California chauvinists are fanning into flames the ancient and now revived prejudices against the Japs as a race. They seek to bar even Japanese-Americans from returning to the coast. This cannot be done constitutionally, and vigilant terrorism would be a reproach to the coast.

Out here on this coast we might ponder the report of H. V. Kaltenborn, famous newswriter and radio commentator, just back from a 20,000 mile trip through Pacific war areas. He is quoted as saying, on his arrival in San Francisco:

American-born Japanese are doing one of the greatest services for our Pacific armies, and there is no Japanese problem in Hawaii. Why in the world we had to create one here I don't know.

If army control would be as intelligent here as in the islands on the Japanese problem. I would favor it, but I don't blame the army if they don't want to accept the headache here.

I think loyal Japanese here should be given the benefit of the doubt and be permitted to follow their vocations. In view of the situation on the islands in regard to the Japanese, it is evident the problem has not been handled intelligently here.

A General Calls

The visit of Gen. George C. Marshall to Gen. MacArthur is not only of value from the standpoint of military operations, it gives a deserved recognition to MacArthur as field commander. It is not without notice that at the several conferences dealing with the Pacific war. whether held in Washington, Quebec or Cairo, Gen. MacArthur was not in attendance. Since he has a most important assignment and has a battle-won knowledge of Japanese tactics and the experience of many years' residence in the Philippines it would seem he should have been called to attend some of these sessions. Instead he has been communicated with, but he has had no opportunity for personal participation in the destiny-planning conferences. Whether he could not be spared from his post (though Churchill and Roosevelt and Eisenhower and Halsey and Nimitz could) or whether there was a bit of jealousy or of political fear or doubt of his contribution we cannot say. Now, at least, he is recognized by a call from Gen. Marshall, the chief of staff. There are some signs that the Pacific war will not be left in a state of suspended animation pending disposition of public no. 1, who is Hitler. The Atlantic and Pacific wars are of different types. The former is largely now a land and air operation, with the navy for patrol duty. The latter is definitely a navy task in coordination with air and land forces. The Pacific war does not call for large bodies of troops yet, and will not if we can get through to China to organize and supply Chinese armies. So it is within range of probability that action in the Pacific will accelerate this winter and next spring.

"Target Germany"

Allied bombing planes are evidently using airfields in Sicily and maybe in southern Italy for long-range raids on Brenner Pass, Athens airdromes, and Innsbruck. Even where the fields are all laid it takes time to assemble planes, ground-crews, repair depots, barracks, supplies and repairs. It is doubtful if the allies are ready yet to mount the full-scale air offensive which they plan from these bases. The new book "Target Germany", an official story of the first year's work over Europe by the Eighth American Air force gives some statistics which reveal the magnitude of air operations

To make an airfield for 50 bombers it takes 1,500,000 man-hours of labor, 640,000 square yards of concrete and $5,000,000 in money.

Out of a complement of 50 bombers to a field an average of only 20 can get into the air at once, the others being under repair or held in reserve. So it takes 50 such fields to mount a raid for 1000 planes.

To launch such a raid 60,000 men are required, all highly trained specialists; and behind them another 65,000 men to service the 60.-000 specialists who keep the 10,000 men on the 1900 planes in the air. This aggregates the equivalent of ten army divisions for a raid of 1000 planes.

Figures on gasoline consumption have been published a number of times and are similarly startling in their size.

So it is plain to see why we cannot immediately launch big air offensives just a few days after an airfield, as at Foggia, is taken, it explains also why it has taken time to assemble in Britain the men and equipment and supplies for the raids on western Europe. After two years Britain is still carrying the big end of the bombing in that theatre.

But Germany is feeling the growing might and weight of the American air force, which probably will be at its peak on the eve of the great invasion.

Dr. John F. Cramer brings to his new post as dean and director of general extension for the state system of higher education a splendid background of professional training, of experience in Oregon's schools together with a personality both agreeable and forceful. It is safe to predict his administration will be marked with vigor and progress.

Interpreting The War News By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

The war in Europe has crossed the 1943 winter solstice dateline under circumstances foreboding the close approach of the triplefronted climactic attack on nazi Germany.

Eastward, long range Russian artillery is close enough to Vitebsk to lob shells into the half encircled nazi fortress, pivot of the whole Dnieper-Baltic flank of the German defense front. Its loss must lead to a nazi winter retreat that could prove more disastrous than Napoleon's flight from Russia.

Southward, Anglo - American troops in Italy, fighting with French and Italian units, are still far from Rome but the critical keys to nazi outer defenses of the eternal city are cracking. Somewhere behind allied foot troops blasting their way ahead inch by inch must be massed British and American armored power. It has been of relatively small use yet on the Italian mainland due to mountain terrain; but supported by allied air superiority bids fair to speed up the advance on Rome at both ends of the line as more suitable ground for tank action is reached. Westward, from Britain, the accelerating Anglo-American aerial attack serves notice of coming events. Britain - based blastings by medium bombers of added the production schedules invasion-front targets in France, thus far were unimpaired.

end could see nazi footholds on the plant.

Copyright 1943 by the Associated Press Russian soil, already shriveled to a shadow of what they were a year ago, broken from the Baltic to the Black Sea. There are intimations that the nazis may now be fleeing from the Crimea by sea and air.

Linked with the Berlin - announced evacuation of Kherson, German withdrawal from the Crimea must mean a coming wholesale nazi retreat from the Dnieper bend and possibly all southwestern Russia, as well as the Baltic.

Special significance attaches also to indications that prime targets of recent allied air raids have been largely U-boat building or servicing facilities. That lends color to London accounts of increasingly heavy troop movements across the Atlantic now in progress and in continuous prospect as last preparations for a second front invasion are completed.

The impression that it may come sooner than many expect is heightened by the warning from a high American authority that tremendous casualties must be expected within 90 days.

Postmaster General Frank C. Walker, who doubles as democratic national commtiteeman, said after lunching with the president that he didn't think Roosevelt had decided whether to run again or not, adding, "It is much too early to decide.'

If we were a democrat we would say it is almost too late to decide. Roosevelt's very silence makes the decision for him. The president cannot go along until just before the convention and then say, "Well, boys, I'm not going to run." The party then would have to improvise a ticket without the benefit of preliminary sifting of names and poll of party sentiment. Either the president must declare himself out without much further delay or else wreck his party's chances in 1944.

Of course he may have done the latter already.

News Behind The News By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, December 21-Mr. Roosevelt's high commissioner for lend-leasing with the British at Cairo, James M. Landis, flew into town a few days back for an unscheduled, unannounced threats that Landis may quit the whole business and resign in August. Mr. Landis is moving quietly and secretly because evidently he does not wish to bestir another useless flurry of Bri-series of conferences, and, since then, the air in the highest government halls has carried thin

tish criticism, such as backwashed the reports of the five globe - travelling senators upon Paul Mallon their return some weeks back. But what the senators found out is not much more than half of that in which Mr. Landis has been mired in Cairo.

His experiences come only second-hand from those with whom he has conferred, but there are enough of these to piece together a rather solid confirmation of the unsatisfactory situation.

His hearers avow he has been blocked and bypassed completely in the job to which he was assigned after the published criticism of British business enthusiasm, namely the job of seeing that the interests of the lendor-lessor were fully understood and protected thereafter.

If he denies trucks to the Persian government, for instance, the British will send our trucks from lend-lease in their own name. When he sends a man to London to make a lend-lease point, he generally can obtain only an American captain to deal with a British general, the difference in ranks assuring British success for any argument. But if he himself effects a decision in Cairo, he cannot be sure of averting a reversal from Washington

All that the British officers must do to reverse him is to get Churchill to telephone Harry Hopkins, the president's assistant, who immediately sets Mr. Landis right. So promptly are his decisions anticipated, some of his associates have suspected his wires have not been always inviolate or private.

British interests are being hard driven toward maintaining direction of development of the Persian oil fields, which may explain the extraordinary activity here lately of Petroleum Administrator Harold Ickes, who even wants the government to furnish some minority capital through its petroleum reserves corporation to let private American oil companies develop Arabian and Iraquian fields -and the senate Truman committee is still privately pondering why more oil is not available to us from the middle east, where the British have the wells.

All this has made Mr. Landis disheartened and discouraged, as well it might. While, nothing is to be gained by sheer criticism of the British or their exceptionally ambitious trade policies and it is foolish of citizens or commentators now again to indulge their first emotions and give vent to criticism which is merely shunted aside-the time has arrived to set this lend-lease matter straight, completely straight.

Mr. Landis saw both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hopkins at Cairo, either of whom might be able to do the necessary inner spade work, but both were exclusively occupied with problems of winning the war. No doubt their minds are too filled and hands too busy to straighten out this side-mess, but they could get some people to do it, or even empower Mr. Landis to do it.

Unless something is done, senators will become aware of what has been going on, and start again in their own way, the vocal way.
