Question of a boundary change placed in the board's hands mittee. They follow: number of interested property fler, Dewey Greiner.

The deal involves removing a strip of land from the Evergreen district and adding it to the Brush Creek area. Earlier a compromise had been reached by which the boundaries remained the same. but by which five Evergreen children went to Brush Creek school, with Evergreen paying their tuition. This compromise was subsequently, thrown out.

The Tuesday hearing was in ession about two hours, and both districts were well represented by delegates. A poll showed 17 in favor of the petition, three against, and some venturing no opinion. The strip of land concerned embodies some 150 acres, with value assessed at $7400.

Civilian assembly center was the way the Japanese designated the camp, an 11 acre compound formerly used by the Presbyterian mission. The 1750 people held in this camp were housed in 16 buildings formerly used as class rooms by the mission.

The food served in the camp was not bad in comparison with that allowed on the Japanese ship before passengers were transferred to the Gripsholm, Trachsel said. Real hunger was felt by the returning Americans while aboard the Japanese ship and the thoughtfulness of the American Red Cross in handling the situation was praised by the speaker.

Tables were being set with every possible kind of food in quantity when the passengers came aboard at Goa, in India. Candy bars handed out by the Red Cross workers alone averted a riot, Trachsel gave as his belief. The people were too hungry to have withstood the sight of so much food quietly if they had not had the candy bar to relieve the hun-
