Stern Measures for Germany

The Cairo rumor which Pravda published about British-German peace negotiations started writers to digging up the old Cliveden set which in pre-war days was accused of overfriendliness with Hitler. Some imputed to members of this former group an interest in negotiating peace and making a deal with Hitler, Such fears are probably groundless. Dunkirk and what went before bred a desperate fear among Britishers for the security even of their island kingdom, and what came after, the bombing and shelling, bred a hatred not yet avenged. The so-called Cliveden set have not been audibly rebellious as some of our own America First element. Lord Halifax, present ambassador to this country, once inclined to deal with nazi Germany, was the first to denounce the Cairo rumor as a fraud. He has lost one son in the war: another son has lost both his legs. Can one believe his experience in the war has left in him one shred of his former inclination?

There are other and far more powerful groups in Great Britain who are determined to fight the war to the finish. The masses of working people are strongest. See how they hissed and paraded and protested when the imitation fascist. Sir Oswald Mosely was released from prison. Others in the upper ranks of society and politics are equally resolute in adhering to carrying the war through to complete victory. One of them, Lord Vansittart, formerly permanent under-secretary for foreign affairs, has written a book in which he reviews German depravity in international relations and prescribes a rigid discipline to prevent a future outbreak in central Europe.

Lord Vansittart has summarized his views in last Sunday's New York Times magazine section, listing 12 points as the basis of postwar control of Germany:

1. Unconditional surrender of Germany and of other axis and satellite powers.

2. Effective occupation of Germany by an allied army and air force and the establishment of an inter-allied council of control to be maintained until it is decided by the governments concerned to be no longer necessary.

3. The arrest and trial of persons believed guilty of war crimes in countries where they were committed. Neutral countries should be requested not to give sanctuary to any war

4. Complete demobilization and disarmament of all German armed forces, including the surrender of the German fleet and luftwaffe; the same procedure to be applied to other axis powers.

5. Police forces in Germany to be regional, free of central control and to be demilitarized.

6. Abolition in Germany of all military or semi-military training at any age in any form whatever, including abolition of officers' corps and training corps. 7. Evacuation of all territories invaded by axis power.

8. Restoration of, or compensation for loot, machinery and equipment removed or destroyed. Also, restoration of, or compensation for commercial and industrial interests forcibly acquired or seized.

9. Effective control and, where required, the closing down of Germany's war potentials, including aviation in all its forms.

10. No financial loans or assistance to be permitted to Germany or to any of the other axis powers without the approval of the allied nations.

11. The curriculum of school and university studies to be under inter-allied supervision and advice until the re-education of the German people is asured in accordance with the principles of international good-will.

12. German radio and all propaganda to be under inter-allied supervision for such time as may be necessary.

This policy calls for strict policing of Germany, which is not at all easy, as German experience in occupation of adjacent countries now proves. It will be rendered the more difficult because there should be harmony among the three victor nations: Russia, Britain, and the United Nations, which is not an easy order to fill. The policing ultimately should be done in behalf of an international organization rather than by victors over vanguished.

Without doubt the allies will impose stern measures on Germany, but the primary purpose should be to prevent future German gangsterism. While realists of whom Lord Vansittart is one may want to impose a punitive peace, that desire must be tempered lest seeds of bitterness flower in future wars of vengeance.

Speculation on War's End

The office of war information has issued a ukase in which it discourages speculation by both military and civilian officials regarding the probale termination of the war. The Medford Mail-Tribune thinks the warning is belated, since so many fighting men and officials working on the home front already have made their predictions. As far as the public is concerned it will take more than an OWI policy release to button their lips. As the M-T says, dating the war's end is popular "topic no. 1" for warlad war no. 2.

People are funny; no sooner do they get into a project than they commence to figure on when they will be through. Shortly after the legislature starts the press gang will start a pool on when it will end. After we actually got into the war, predictions began almost immediately on how long it would last. Even now, when the hard fighting en masse hasn't begun, there is discussion on the date for the end of the war and a lot of talk about meeting the "postwar blems." In fact the public seems to be doing more thinking about that right now than about winning the war - which puts the horse well behind the cart.

Really though, the commentaries from men osedly in the know are confusing and of little value. Air force commanders have been boastful of what they were going to do in the crescendo of the air war. And Sec. Knox alterutterances of big-wigs, because one can't be sure whether they are saying what they mean and telilng what they know or trying to do something to influence American morale or enemy morale. The boasting may be intended for German consumption; and the utterances of gloom may be just like the bear talk of football coaches before the big game. Or the fizz-tap may be turned on by the public relations men who think the Americans need a shot of gas to buoy

The important thing is that we are in the war; that its end cannot be predicted with the slightest degree of certainty even by the high command; that there are no signs that either enemy will collapse within the next few months. In other words the end of the war still awaits the decision of battle—a battle which is not yet really joined in either major theatre. Our advice is to attach little weight to commentaries of military or civilian officials, except those in formal addresses or statements Only one thing seems true; the war will not be over until it is won: and when it will be won not even Gen. Marshall or Adm. King knows.

All that FDR said when a group of democratic leaders presented him with a resolution favoring his fourth nomination was "Oh." Maybe the country will add one word to that exclamation and make it "Oh no."

The Commercial National bank at Hillsboro, one of the aggressive and successful independent banks of the state, issues a unique statement to stockholders, depositors and friends. It publishes not only the conventional statement required by the comptroller of the currency, but its financial statement, showing gross and net earnings and expenses. It details the bank's holdings of government and municipal bonds. This bank, of which W. C. Christensen is president, is always on the lookout for local loans, carrying now about one-sixth of its deposits in such investments. The record of this bank shows that an independent bank can succeed, can serve its community and still be highly profitable to its stockholders.

Our victories are still mostly in the headlines. Americans and British are advancing only by yards. Even the Russians, who are recovering ground, have not entrapped all the thousands of Germans whom they say are threatened. If we study maps instead of headlines we get a better perspective of the warfare ahead.

News Behind The News

By PAUL MALLON

(Distribution by King Features Syndicate, Inc. Repro-

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22-Speaker Sam Rayburn told the Chicago Mayors' conference the administration would provide a public works program-not for some far future period when depression might set in-but to take up the lag right away at the end of the war. He added a new wrinkle to the announced plan of Vice President Wallace to build a stack of blueprints for future construction of sewers, dams, reforestation, etc., if needed. Such projects are the meat upon which politics feeds-the luscious, fat, juicy pork. If the war is over before next November,

Mr. Rayburn intends that unspecified millions or billions will be Paul Mallon available in time to do the best possible good for the democratic cause.

Meanwhile, he is appointing a special house postwar fact finding committee (non-partisan, he said) to mull over the building projects they are always pushing in their local districts. So the political effect will not be lost even if the war fails to come to an obliging conclusion. The names of congressmen can be identified in their home localities with the projects, and local contractors may lick their lips.

"We all know that a public works program will be necessary," Rayburn said-which may be true as far as the hungry congressmen and mayors are concerned-but a non-political analyst may well dissent. The theory on which the whole politicoeconomic idea is based is that by spending for these projects, and financing them through federal borrowing, an inflationary effect is wrought. That is how this public works notion got started early in the New Deal.

But now the problem is the opposite—that is to prevent inflation and to face the staggering war debt of $200,000,000,000 with a sensible eye toward paying it off (as Mr. Roosevelt has promised).

The government certainly will not attempt to borrow for pork in postwar because its primary problem is to pay the interest on the debt as big as it already is. Also, it will not seek artificial inflationary respiration in an economic system already war-inflated with high prices and wages-or need any artificial respiration in view of the tremendous backlog of consumer demand for every implement of living from matches to automobiles.

Inflation would only run wages-prices higher and higher (Mr. Roosevelt is now fighting a major battle with congress to hold them down), and thus cause future continuous dislocations such as those from which our economy already is suffering so painfully (strikes, OPA, black markets, etc.).

There is no economic justification for a spending program; in fact, conditions demand an opposite course-federal direction to stimulate private business to the tremendous extent neecssary to finance the $5,000,000,000 annual interest on the debt and provide government running expenses without further treasury borrowing.

Indeed, the sound way to do it would be—as Mr. Roosevelt himself has suggested—to raise en-ough money by taxes to go further and retire part

Now if Messrs. Wallace and Rayburn intend to get these untold billions for pork out of postwar taxation, they may find themselves in political water as hot as the economic water.

The taxpayers now are groaning audibly under the war load, which is necessary. They may groan words of caution that there are rugged days ahead. Frankly we pay little attention to the by internal discord, by stupid leadership and slothfulness France remains French, her people longing for the day of liber-

They look to the Americans and British as their liberators. In Paris the French rejoiced when British planes raided their city. When Mrs. Shiber was released from prison she went to a little French restaurant for food while she waited for the train. She had no ration card, so the proprietor could not serve her for fear of having his business closed. When he found she was American he took her to his apartment and served her as a personal guest. He said:

"You remember, Madame, what your Gen. Pershing said when he arrived in 1917, Lafayette, we are here!' The Americans saved France then, and we know they will save us again. That is our last hope, and our only hope, Madame-your country. We know she will not fail the people of France."

Such a book as "Paris Underground" renews the fires of 1917-18, makes the war seem more of a crusade to preserve the world from the nazi dragon. If two women in the heart of Paris can start and operate an underground, keeping soldiers in their own apartment and then from France, even helping men can endure the inconveniences and the minor deprivations which the war entails, and can brace ourselves for harder sacrifice as the war goes on.

effort rests upon adding up the entributions of the many. The individual bond buyer can, if he likes, translate his purchase in terms of so many mbs or bullets rained upon the axis. Or he can reckon in sober reality that the amount of his purchase has borne the entire cost of the gigantic united nations' war effort for a tiny fraction of its duration. Better still, he can reckon it in negative terms - in terms o satisfactions deferred, of things not bought, trips not taken, materials and services released for the prosecution of the war. For these

Court Holds Memorial For Bennett

Strength of character, clearness of thought, decisiveness in action were attributes of Talbot S. Bennett as summed up in a resolution drawn and adopted by the Marion County Bar association at a memorial meeting held Saturday in circuit court for the former assistant district attorney who was killed in action last January 2 while engaging in the Bougainville campaign in the south Pacific.

To the Critically Thoughtful:

A recent magazine advertise-ment informed the reader that the purchaser of spectacles bought much more than a frame and two scientifically ground lenses. In addition he was securing the skill, know-ledge and integrity of the pre-scribing physician. The obvious moral of the story being that one should not buy glasses on the basis of price alone. It seems to me that we should use the same selective judgment concerning spiritual things. Why shouldn't we ask of a speaker concerning his education, background, and general training to speak on a par-ticular subject? We do well to remember that there are specific academic degrees which help fit men to speak inteligently on religious subjects. Sincerity in religion is not enough. Men must have certain basic understandings of history, language, and theo logy

All of us are deeply interested in the involvements that result from America's participation in world affairs. What is a sane, constructive, practical at-titude for the church? I, personally could not answer the question with authority. How-ever First Presbyterian Church is happy to present a Church is happy to present a Christian statesman who can give some reliable information in this feild. Sunday evening at 7:30 we present Dr. Chas. Tudor Leber, author, world-traveler, and Sect. of the Board of eler, and Sect. of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A. Mr. Leber is a graduate of Johns Hopkins University and Princeton Theological Seminary. He has made two world tours within the last seven years and is eminently qualified to render a dependable judgment on world affairs.
