Duncan Tells Of Pocket Radio Sets

Remarkable development of radio along several lines including "personalized" radio whereby individuals may communicate with pocket sending and receiving sets—an adaptation of the wartime "walkie-talkie" was predicted for the postwar period by Chester Duncan, public relations director for station KOIN of Portland, in an address at the Salem Kiwanis club luncheon Tuesday.

Television has been perfected to a high degree and awaits only a peacetime opportunity for full utilization, Duncan said; one use may be rapid transmission of official documents.

The "free" American radio, conscious that it is licensed to use the public's limited number of air waves, has a high sense of obligation to serve the public and strictly limits the time devoted to commercial announcements, Duncan said. He was introduced by Jesse J. Gard, Marion county war finance committee chairman who introduced the KOIN Million Dollar club to broadcast the fourth war loan windup program from Salem.

Window Broken

Walter S. Lamkin, Salem attorney, reported Tuesday to Salem police that a rear window in his residence at 690 Electric street was broken Monday night at approximately 10 o'clock with a rock. Police believe the rock had been taken from a stone wall at 2090 South Cottage street.

Water Shortage Faces Oregon

CORVALLIS, Feb. 15—(AP)—Unless Oregon gets heavy snowfalls before April 1 it will go into the summer with insufficient water for irrigation, R. A. Work predicted today.

The forecast, based on February 1 snow conditions, warned that only areas with well-filled holdover reservoirs could expect good to fair water supplies for farming. Work is director of snow surveys and irrigation water forecasts for the soil conservation service and the Oregon State college experiment station.

Snow water content runs from 51 to 57 per cent of average, Work said. Reservoir storage, though 20 per cent under the level of February, 1943, was described as fair.

TOPEKA, Kas., Feb. 15—(AP)—Harry W. Woodring said today he would leave Friday for a series of conferences in Chicago and New York in the interests of furthering organization of the new American democratic party on an anti-fourth term platform.

Woodring, former secretary of war, said he was receiving several hundred letters a day about the movement, many of them with donations. A national convention has been scheduled for April, probably in St. Louis.

Simpson Rite To Be Friday In Portland

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Friday from the Edward Holman mortuary, 2410 Southeast Hawthorne boulevard, Portland, for O. G. Simpson, chief of the foods and dairies division of the state department of agriculture, who died unexpectedly Monday night at his home in Portland at the age of 59 years. He had been active to last Friday, when he was stricken while delivering an address before the annual meeting of the Oregon Dairymen's association at Eugene.

Appointed to his executive post last October 8, Simpson had been with the department of agriculture since 1936 as cream grading supervisor and in charge of the Babcock testing laboratory in Portland.

Simpson was a graduate of Oregon State college and the school of agriculture of Cornell university and had also done special work at University of Wisconsin. He had wide experience in both practical and technical lines in his field. From 1909 to 1917 he was an instructor at Oregon State college and there set up the dairy manufacturing division. From 1920 to 1936 he was engaged in dairy and creamery managerial capacities, resigning to join the department of agriculture.

High tribute to the work Simpson had done during the short period he had served as division chief and to him as a man was paid Tuesday by Director E. L. Peterson of the department of agriculture.

Surviving are the widow and two sons.

Robb Will Contest To Be Reopened

Dismissal by Judge Ashby C. Dickson of a suit in the Multnomah county circuit court contesting the will of the late Josephine M. Robb, who died in Portland January 5, 1942, was reversed by the state supreme court Tuesday. The case was referred back to Judge Dickson for trial.

Mrs. Robb bequeathed $1000 to Leona Peasley, a friend, and the remainder to S. F. Wilson, her attorney and executor of the estate, except for $1 each to Anna Lyons, Annie Goodman and Charles M. Ward, nieces and nephews, who filed the contest alleging that Wilson exerted undue influence upon Mrs. Robb when the will was executed.

Judge Dickson dismissed the suit for lack of evidence, after hearing part of the testimony. The supreme court opinion held there was some evidence from which the circuit judge "could have properly concluded that Wilson exerted undue influence."

Representation Of West Favored On Federal Boards

Representation of western states on all federal boards and commissions dealing with postwar disposition of war plants and commodities, was favored at a meeting of western states' representatives to the council of state governments in Carson City, Nev., last week, George H. Aiken, state budget director, reported Tuesday on his return.

Aiken represented Gov. Earl Snell at the meeting which was called by Sen. Pat McCarran of Nevada. Much of the discussion centered on steel and aluminum plants, Aiken said.

William Green, president of the AFL, made the appointment of Mrs. Hasenstab upon recommendation of Mrs. Zilkoski and Charles R. Smith, state organizer, according to Mrs. Zilkoski.

The new organizer has been prominent in cannery union work here and an officer of the Oregon State Council of Cannery and Process Workers' unions. Mrs. Zilkoski has held the position the past two years.

Archer Charged Carrying Weapon

Harold Clyde Archer of Eugene was in the county jail Tuesday night booked by state police on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon, after his estranged wife early Tuesday morning had run into a neighbor's house on route 6 crying that he was about to shoot her. A state police officer was dispatched to the scene when the woman called headquarters and found Archer peaceable enough but carrying a loaded revolver under his shirt.

Mrs. Archer later refused to prefer charges against her husband, from whom she has been separated for some time. She stated that Archer had threatened her at her home in the early hours of Tuesday and that on the pretext of getting some clothes from the line she had gone to the neighbors to get aid.

Civilian Mail Service Resumed To Parts of Italy

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15—(AP)—Limited civilian mail service between the United States and parts of Italy now held by United Nations forces will be resumed tomorrow.

The post office department, announcing this tonight, said service also will be started at the same time between the united kingdom and the same Italian regions. Service to Italian territories in Africa already is in effect.
