Don't Look Now...

bat... As we write this on April Fool's day, not telling what our typewriter will knock out.

Perhaps you've noticed... our system of the bank. We walk in, take quick stock of the people waiting at the wicket and get behind the line that will take us to the window the quickest. This is the system, if there are more women than men lined up at the window taken care of by a woman you take that, if the man cashier is confronted by more men than women, you can speed along at that window. Even a bank cashier can't help chatting with the customers of the opposite sex, but one of his own—why he just takes the money and sends 'em off in a hurry!

Peeping Mother Sills... Windowshoppers on Liberty street Friday afternoon were startled at seeing two frightened looking women being marched down the street among five snappily uniformed WAVES. It looked like a court marshal for sure—but it was only Ruby Bergsvik (a WAVE mother) and I, both too old to join but not too old to enjoy a coke with practically the whole WAVE recruiting staff from Portland.

Simple as that... we get some funny stuff sometimes. This week came a letter, which, after reading it through, I believe it is meant to persuade the reader that you can solve the problem of juvenile delinquency by serving soft drinks with straws. "Soft drinks and straws" the letter goes on, "without them, no get-together (for 'teen agers) would be a success... they prevent gulping, etc. etc." Sensible, isn't it? Well anyway, the gulping idea isn't so bad.

I shouldn't even hope... you'd laugh, but it just occurred to me, when watching the women get on the penny scales and then look puzzled, that perhaps they expected to weigh less in their new light spring clothes. Reminded me of course of the man who fell out of the fourth story but didn't mind, because he had on his light fall underwear.
