Layton Appeal Will Be Heard

Argument of attorneys in th appealed case of Richard Harvey Layton, under death sentence for the slaving of Ruth Hildebrand. 17, in Polk county, on June 7, 1943, wil be heard by the state supreme court here today.

Prosecuting officials contend that Layton lured Miss Hildebrand to a timbered district, south of Independence, where her body was found floating in the Willamette river. Layton was convicted of first-degree murder in the Polk county circuit court with

The appeal was based on alleged improper instructions to the jury. Layton denied that he attacked Miss Hildebrand and testified at his trial in the lower court that she fell into the stream. Layton, at one time city marshal of Monmouth, has been in the state penitentiary here since his

Old Portland Coffee Firm In New Hands

Closset & Devers, pioneer coffee roasting firm of Fortland, has been purchased by the Ben Hur Products company, Incorporated, Los Angeles coffee, extract and condiment house. Harry B. Wyeth, jr., Ben Hur president, made the announcement Monday at the conclusion of purchase negotiations conductpresident of the California concern, with A. E. Digman and R. vers. Purchase price was not an-

Wyeth stated they would retain the name, present policies and the employes of the firm that has extended the distribution and sales of its product, Golden West coffee, throughout Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana, C. I. with the firm.

Future plans of Digman, who started with Closset & Devers more than 50 years ago as office boy and its president since 1929, and Bain, who has been with the firm for 33 years, were not announced.

The history of Closset & Devers goes back to the days of growth. In 1882 Joseph Closset and Arthur Devers, Portland philanthropist, set up a hand-operated coffee roaster in a small store location in Portland's old Front street commercial district. After Closset's retirement the firm was operated by Devers until 1919, when Digman and Bain were made members of the firm. Devers retired in 1929.

When asked if the merger of the two companies suggested an increase in Portland plant capacity and marketing area, Wyeth stated that postwar expansion in both plant facility and personnel were prime considerations in the merging of the two firms.

"The permanent population increase in all sections of the Palenge to western manufacturers," continued Wyeth, "and we plan PROBATE COURT Golden West and Ben Hur production and sales policies to keep praised at $164.36. pace with the coast's population

Recheck Adds Names to List

Recheck here Monday by the state department showed that 361 candidates filed for the primary election this year instead of 352 candidates as previously an-

Certification of the candidates to the county clerks, slated for last Saturday, was postponed until Tuesday. No request from Wendell L. Willkie, to have his name eliminated from the ballot as a presidential candidate, had been received at the state department Monday afternoon.

Many of the counties will start printing their ballots later this week, state department officials were advised.
