

Princess Elizabeth Discovers Being Queen Real Profession

AP Features

Queenship is a profession like any other. To be successful, you have to work at it.

Princess Elizabeth of England has been working at it ever since her parents' coronation, and she's not finished yet. Now that she's 18, her "vocational training" will be intensified, and the job of making a slender, blue-eyed youngster into a queen will be rounded out.

Elizabeth would probably be the first to admit that there's more to being a queen than just wearing a crown and waving gracefully to admirers. Subjects that are classroom bores to the average 18-year-old are job training to her—constitutional law, economic history and geography, foreign relations, world geography.

England's next queen never had a chance to cut classes, either, because she never went to school. Although her mother wanted Elizabeth to attend a public school and mix with other girls of her age, court attendants, who pointed out the difficulties of classmates having to curtsy to the future queen won out, and Elizabeth has been tutored entirely at home.

The Queen, herself, started little five-year-old Lilibet off on French with the aid of specially prepared phonograph records. By the time she was in her early teens, she had studied Latin, Spanish, German, the Scriptures and the three R's. She learned court etiquette and the duties of queenship from Queen Mother Mary, whose pearls were Lilibet's first teaching ring.

Elizabeth's parents have tried to ease her into royal duties gradually, and at the same time bring her up with a little fuss and pomp as possible under the circumstances. She learned cooking, first aid, and bedmaking as a Girl Guide, the English equivalent of America's Girl Scouts, and paid four cents dues out of her weekly 25-cent allowance like any other Guide member. And like hundreds of other youngsters, she stepped out of childhood and into her teens with a box of long silk stockings, a present from her mother, to prove she'd grown up. Elizabeth, who will some day wear the crown of England, wore her first coronet and royal robes at her parents' coronation, and showed the stuff that queens are made of by sitting through the whole ceremony without fidgeting.

In other early public appearances, she reviewed the Girl Guides, and presented rosettes to winners of the National Pony Society's show when she was 12. When she was 16, her father approved her appointment as colonel in the Grenadier Guards, and Elizabeth danced at her birthday reception for some 450 officers and men.

At 14, in one of her first public speeches, she spoke over the microphone to Britain's evacuated children, and told them "we children at home are full of cheerfulness and courage."

Now, at 18, Elizabeth is finished with childhood. Under the regency act, she is a potential councilor of state, and can act with others for King George when he is absent from the country. To give her time to prepare for royal duties, Britain's next Queen Bees has been exempted from national service, because England thinks it takes more training to wear a crown than a uniform.

Blowing Match Proves Owner

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., April 20—(P)—When Ralph Prims saw a stranger with a dog recognized the animal as one stolen from him five months before and demanded its return.

"Prove it's your dog," replied the stranger. Prims lighted a match and placing the flame in front of the dog's mouth ordered "Blow it out." The dog blew out the match. "It's your dog," conceded the stranger who said Prims could have the animal for $20—fifteen to cover the purchase price paid by the stranger and the rest for board.

Aumsville Parents Like MacArthur

AUMSVILLE—Parents of this community were gratified to read the news story in The Statesman Wednesday, stating the attitude taken by General Douglas MacArthur, regarding the gift of scotch, which he declined to have sent to Maj. Richard Bong. Aumsville parents, as Major Bong's parents, have spent the past 25 years teaching their sons the evils of liquor, and they object to any gift of that kind, being considered a "decoration" for heroism.

Tax Distributions Go to Sub-Divisions

Distribution of tax collections since April 15 and the last half of money received from the state school support fund totaling $277,643.88, has been made to the 128 political sub-divisions of Marion county by County Treasurer Sam Butler. The sub-divisions include cities, schools, etc. Butler stated that his office is now up-to-date in matter of tax-turnovers. He added that the school support money was the last of its nature which would be received this year from the state.

Gaylord, Robey Will Speak at Conference

PORTLAND, April 20—(P)—Robert M. Gaylord, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, and Dr. Ralph W. Robey, Newsweek business editor, will speak at Oregon's sixth annual industrial conference here May 2.

The conference is sponsored by the association, Columbia Empire Industries and the Portland chamber of commerce.

Don't Let YOUR FARM GET INTO A "RUN-DOWN" CONDITION

PABCO Shingle Paint

Nothing adds to the appearance (and the value!) of farm buildings like well-painted roofs. Shingles protected by PABCO SHINGLE PAINT are far less likely to curl, crack or dry out. Heavy-bodied, easily applied, economical. Rich tones of green, brown or red.

PABCO Implement ENAMEL

Don't let rust ruin valuable equipment! Here's a ready-to-use, high gloss, all purpose material for the preservation of farm tools and garden machinery and tools. Self-leveling qualities and easy brushing combine to provide an enamel of excellent value.

GALVIZE METAL PAINT

Especially formulated for metal painting... choice of green, gray, cream or red. Dries to a flat, cement-like texture with a hard yet flexible film... waterproof, weatherproof, decorative. Easy to brush or spray.
