Fire Destroys Two Turner Buildings

TURNER, May 25 — Fire Thursday morning completely destroyed the 2-story frame Townsend building and partially destroyed the adjoining building which formerly housed a meat market. The Townsend building is owned by M. E. Townsend of Salem and was unoccupied except for the living quarters of Godfrey Hughes at the rear. The fire was discovered at 9:30 when half of the Townsend building was in flames. Hughes came home recently after six weeks in a Salem hospital and had gone down town to shop. The fire started in his living quarters.

Mrs. S. A. Davis, employed in Salem, occupied the living quarters at the rear of the former meat market. A concrete tile building formerly occupied by a confectionery next the market stopped the fire in the opinion of local residents.

Turner high school students were dismissed to assist in manning the five lines of hose and calls were sent to Aumsville and East Salem for help. The fire was under control when the East Salem pumper arrived but Aumsville arrived in 20 minutes to provide some help in bringing the blaze under control.

Both buildings were covered by insurance. The Prather Drug store just beyond the confectionery store was threatened by the fire as were the Haggard barber shop and the Turner Mercantile over which the IOOF lodge hall is housed. The buildings burned are in the heart of Turner business district and a change of wind would have been disastrous, firemen said.
