Dies Suddenly

Lloyd Smith Dies in Sleep

Death came to Lloyd R. Smith, state corporation commissioner, Monday night during his sleep at his home in Portland. While Mr. Smith had not been in good health for the past three years, he had been regularly at his duties in recent months. He was in his Portland office Monday and planned to come to Salem Tuesday, Monday night after the news of the invasion broke his sister, Mrs. Elliott R. Corbett, called him by telephone to discuss the news. Then he retired, and passed away evidently without distress during the night.

Prominent in state business and political circles, Smith was held in high esteem, particularly in Portland where he had spent his life, and in Salem. He was long active in republican political circles, serving as treasurer of the republican state central committee from 1932 until 1938 when he resigned to take an active part in the campaign of Charles A. Sprague for governor. He was appointed corporation commissioner by Gov. Sprague in 1939 and reappointed in 1943 and retained in office by Gov. Earl Snell.

Smith was born in Portland, October 29, 1881, the son of Albert T. and Laura Smith, at their family home on SW Vista avenue. He received his education at the old Portland academy, where he was one of its star football players, captain of the academy's championship team in 1901, after his graduation playing with the teams of the Multnomah Athletic club, of which he was a director for a number of terms commencing in 1927, and serving as president of the club in 1934.

After completing his studies, Smith was employed in the banking business for a number of years, being cashier of the Oregon Trust & Savings bank. Later, he served as deputy city assessor under the administration of E. D. Sigler, and from that employment went into the insurance business, organizing the well-known firm of Campbell, Smith & Co., with which concern he continued actively until his appointment as corporation commissioner.

During World War I Smith was an active member of the Home Guard, charged with the safeguarding of the Portland waterfront and the downtown area generally.

In 1908 Smith was married to Miss Estelle Linehan of Quincy, Ill. They have two children—a son, 1st Lieut. Peter R. Smith, now stationed at Riverside Academy, Gainesville, Fla.; and a daughter, 1st Lieut. of the WAC Barbara Jane Smith, now stationed at Washington, DC. He leaves two sisters, Mrs. Elliott R. Corbett of Portland and Mrs. Leslie S. Miller, Gearhart.

The daughter, Lieut. Barbara Jane Smith came over from Washington by plane yesterday, and efforts are being made to reach the son, Lieut. Peter Smith, who was transferring to his new station in Florida. Funeral arrangements will be announced by J. P. Finley & Son, Portland.

Snell Urges D-Day Prayer By Oregonians

People of Oregon were urged to join in solemn prayer for the success of the Allied cause in the great struggle for freedom now in progress, in a statement issued by Gov. Earl Snell here today.

"The invasion of the continent by the Allied forces marks a day that will be one of the most memorable in the annals of history for centuries to come," Gov. Snell said.

"I call upon the people of our great state to join in solemn prayer for the success of the Allied cause in this great struggle for freedom and truth; for the strength, guidance and security of our brave lads locked in a life and death conflict that peace and freedom may reign throughout the world."

"Early reports are encouraging, but I appeal to you, good citizens of Oregon, with all the sincerity that I possess, that there must be no letdown. We are, perhaps, facing the most critical crisis of this war."

"Let us on this day renew our pledge to make every sacrifice and contribution possible here in the home front and back our boys and the Allied cause to the fullest extent of our ability and capacity."

Snell Expects Forest Funds

Gov. Earl Snell, upon his return here Tuesday from Hershey, Pa., where he attended the annual conference of state governors, expressed confidence that the state of Oregon will receive a federal forest protection appropriation in excess of $6,000,000 for the current year.

This assurance was received by Snell, he said, when he stopped off at Washington, DC, enroute home, where he conferred with Sen. Guy Cordon and other members of the Oregon congressional delegation. Previous information from Washington indicated that the forest appropriation would be reduced approximately 50 per cent. The appropriation bill is now in a conference committee.

Snell said the governors considered many important problems at their conference, some of which were of particular interest to Oregon and other west coast states. These have to do with reclamation, industrial expansion after the war, and other post-war problems.
